Ruml Plan Again Loses; Tax Leaders In Dilemma

Measure Is Beaten In House 202-194; Lengthy Deadlock Deemed Possible

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Capitol tax leaders tomorrow will begin trying to find a pay-as-you-earn tax bill that Congress and the President can accept, after the House yesterday, voting with the Chief Executive and against the Senate, dealt the Ruml skip-a-year plan its third and apparently decisive beating.

What will come out of the joint conference to break the three-way House - Senate - presidential disagreement was an open question The votes appeared to be on tap to block any plan, including the Ruml one, and there was no clear majority for anything. Some members predicted a lengthy and possibly indefinite deadlock. Others prepared for compromise, either by abating 75 instead of 100 per cent of a year's tax, or by starting withholding collections minus any tax abatement.

Veto Threat Works

President Roosevelt's threat to veto the Ruml plan if it were sent to him was believed to have gone a long way toward clinching the Administration's final successful stand against it on the House floor. Democrats who had been wavering a few hours earlier fell into the party line when the test came, two of them changing their vote at the last minute to help defeat the Ruml plan.

The test came on the motion of Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota to instruct the House conferees to accept the Ruml plan as contained in the bill which the Senate approved last week, 49 to 30. The House overrode this idea, 202 to 194, doubling exactly the four-vote margin by which it defeated the Ruml plan two weeks ago to the day.

Followed Party Lines

The House vote followed almost straight party lines. Seven Democrats joined 187 Republicans for the Ruml plan. They were opposed by 190 Democrats, 9 Republicans 2 Progressives and 1 Farmer Laborite. A moment before the result was announced, Representatives Hendricks (Democrat) of Florida and Bates of Kentucky withdrew votes for the Ruml plan and voted against it. Bates was one of five Democrats who turned against the Ruml plan since the vote two weeks ago, the others being Celler of New York, Hebert and Larcade of Louisiana and Randolph of West Virginia. Three members went the other way, including Representatives Ludlow (Democrat) of Indiana, Horan of Washington and Poulson of California, both Republicans.

Knutson, however, pleading with the Democrats not to let the President's views "stampede you," warned that the conference, now scheduled, would mean that "we're going to have a deadlock that will last for days and days, and finally result in a stalemate." The Minnesotan disputed the idea that the President had threatened a veto, saying that a letter he had sent to the Capitol the night before indicated simply that he would allow the Ruml bill to become law without a signature.

Doughton Disagrees

Representative Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, 79-year-old chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, leading his third anti-Ruml drive, said that the President had clearly stated his veto intention. Knutson snapped at Doughton to "be your age," to the delight of the House, but Doughton went on to say that

Cox, Irked by Radio Talk, Pulls Rogers' Hair on House Floor

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia yesterday pulled the hair of Representative Rogers (Democrat) of California, in an aggressive action on the House floor, inspired, said Cox, by a recent radio speech of Rogers in which Cox said the Californian accused him of taking a bribe.

The pair met again a few minutes later in a lobby just off the House floor and skirmished verbally.

While members of Congress and newspapermen expectantly milled about, in anticipation of a more violent encounter, Speaker Rayburn of Texas, intervened. He took Cox, a close personal friend, into a conference room just off the lobby and closed the door.

The pair emerged shortly and Cox, mollified, took his hat and left the Capitol, but not before issuing this adaptation of the usual ringside "it-was-a-great-battle-mother" statement:

"That young fellow said on the radio that I took a bribe. Nobody can take a thing like that. I didn't take a poke at him, but I mussed him up a little. It didn't amount to much."

While Rogers, son of the late humorist, Will Rogers, denied making the accusation, the reference to a bribe was clearly associated with Cox's acceptance of $2500 in stock in radio station WALB at Albany, Ga., for "legal expenses."

Federal Communications Commissioner Clifford J. Durr in a statement filed with the Speaker last week, suggested that Cox's acceptance of the fee might have been in violation of the Federal criminal code. Cox is chairman of an FCC Investigating Committee created by a House resolution which the Georgian sponsored.

"I heard that the little—said I was drunk," Cox told reporters in explaining why he had engaged Rogers the second time.

This is what Rogers said:

"No! I did not intend to imply that he was drunk. By no means.

Ickes Won't Bypass WLB In Coal Talks

Disavows Intention To Negotiate Over Head of Agency

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday disavowed any intention to negotiate a collective bargaining contract between John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and the country's coal operators, thus making it virtually certain that a final decision would be made by order of the War Labor Board.

Ickes made his position clear in an open letter to Lewis made public after he conferred at the White House with Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes and War Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis.

In New York, Lewis, after reading the text of the letter, parried all questions with: "I wouldn't have any comment on that at the present time."

Davis took to the conference clear-cut instructions from the full board to insist that settlement of the coal controversy be left to WLB with the understanding that

House Vote Bans Salaries for Dodd, Watson, Lovett

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a 134-million-dollar deficiency appropriation bill with amendments denying funds for the salary of three Government employes and prohibiting the use of any of the President's emergency funds for the Farm Security Administration or the National Resources Planning Board.

An amendment denying salary or expenses for Dr. Goodwin Watson and William E. Dodd, jr., of the Communications Commission and Secretary Robert Morss Lovett of the Virgin Islands government was adopted on a roll-call vote of 317 to 62. The trio had been held unfit for public office by an appropriations subcommittee which investigated their alleged affiliation with organizations listed by the Dies Committee as subversive.

The amendment restricting use of the President's funds was written into the bill on a standing vote of 155 to 101.

Black Market In Spuds Gets 'Under Cover'

Some Potatoes Arrive for Hospitals, Stores in Capital

The Washington area's black market seemed to have pulled in its horns and gone under cover yesterday after The Post's disclosures of two specific locations where the "black" spuds were being sold, and the District OPA had no announcement as to steps toward prosecutions.

John L. Laskey, chief attorney for the local OPA, said the case of Bob's liquor store, 113 Baltimore Boulevard, Colmar Manor, Md., had been refered to the Maryland OPA for action. This was the place where a Post reporter purchased a 100-pound sack of potatoes, the last of 2500 pounds the store had on hand the night before.

As to the case of the District Grocery Store at 901 L Street Northwest, where "black" potatoes also were purchased by The Post, Laskey said there had been "no developments which I can make public."

The potato famine seemed little abated here yesterday, despite the five carloads which arrived for legitimate sale Monday. Two cars of Florida Red Bliss potatoes arrived at the Union Market for legitimate sale yesterday and were hastily snapped up by buyers and commission merchants.

Another car, on special consignment to the District Government, arrived and the potatoes were hastily unloaded—under guard—and taken to Gallinger Hospital, Glendale Tuberculosis Sanitarium and the District Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets.

They were received by Roland Brennan, the District purchasing officer, who said the District jail and other District institutions would have to get along on spaghetti and rice until the regular supply comes in. The potatoes for the hospitals will be used to fill necessary dietary requirements, he said.

Meanwhile, there remain a doubt whether the Texas Irish potato crop would reach northern markets within the next few days. Texas Agriculture Commissioner J. E. MacDonald has advised growers there to hold out for $3.50 per 100 pounds, despite the OPA's ceiling of $2.50 per hundredweight, the Associated Press reported.

Yanks Capture Island Height; Bombers Batter Japs on Wake

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American Army forces have captured an important ridge dominating the main Japanese positions on Attu Island and are slowly closing in on the entrenched enemy from north and south. In addition, United States planes have bombed the enemy on Wake Island.

Lifting the blanket of official silence over the first week of operations on remote Attu, in the Aleutian Islands, the Navy revealed that our troops have seized and consolidated strong positions there and have begun a nut-cracker movement against the Jap base.

Bombardment Continued

The iron jaws of this pincers are irresistibly shutting and need only a break in the weather to crush the strong Nipponese resistance, observers here believe. Considerable heavy fighting still is ahead, it appears.

American warships are continuing to bombard the Japanese positions which are along the southern and eastern shores of Holtz Bay at the northeastern corner of the island, the Navy said. Our planes, also, are attacking whenever the weather permits.

Despite strong enemy opposition, particularly against the seizure of a portion of a 3000-foot rocky ridge which forms the backbone of the eastern end of the island. American casualties to date have been light, it was announced.

Two Zeros Shot Down

But though heavy fog has held American air operations against the Attu Japs to the minimum, elsewhere in the Pacific our planes were hitting enemy bases.

Army Liberator bombers last Saturday pounded Wake Island—the American outpost captured by the Japs in December, 1941, after one of the most gallant stands in all history.

Bad weather prevented results of the bombing from being observed, but in an aerial fight over the island between the Liberators and 22 Zeros, two of the latter were shot down and one other probably was destroyed. There was no mention, in the Navy communique, of any United States planes being lost.

Satisfactory Progress

The first official word on the progress of the Attu offensive was given in two Navy communiques and a press conference statement by Secretary Knox during the day.

In the earlier communique, the Navy declared that "the military situation now permits the announcements of some of the details" of the week-old landing on

Catastrophe

By the Associated Press

London, May 18.—Destructive flood waters loosed by the R. A. F.'s blasting of two of Germany's largest dams were shown by new aerial photographs tonight to be surging unchecked down the Ruhr Valley, creating havoc in the heart of Hitler's war industry.

The latest reconnaissance pictures of the spreading torrents rolling beyond the broken Mohne and Eder Dams were taken today as Allied air units carried their nonstop preinvasion bombardment into its seventh day with lightning stabs at Europe.

The new pictures showed the floodtide rushing through the Middle Ruhr toward Duisburg and the Rhine and through the Weser Valley beyond Kassel.

The air ministry said the continued spread of the flood indicated that a vast area of the valley already was inundated, with important industries crippled, casualties heavy and still greater factory centers imperiled if not already flooded.

[The International News Service quoted Bern reports as saying that at least 4000 had been killed and 120,000 made homeless in the first day of what was described as Germany's greatest catastrophe since the war began.

Heaviest Single Blow

[Further backing up the Bern report, the loss of life involved in the bombing of the two dams could be indicated by their comparisons with the Conemaugh Dam, which broke May 31, 1889, and caused the Johnstown, Pa., flood and killed 2209. The Eder Dam stored nearly 4 times as much water as the Conemaugh, and the Mohne was 3 times as large.—Editor's note.]

The pictures showed plainly that the devastation is surpassing even the highest hopes expressed earlier.

The dramatic feat of the especially trained British bomber crews was rapidly reaching the proportions of the heaviest single blow of the war to German industry.

Parts of Kassel Submerged

Some railways and canals which pass through the areas below both of these dams, two of the greatest in Germany, were made useless by the torrents of water from the broken reservoirs. The water traffic, which bears a great portion of the Reich's transportation, was disrupted. The Eder Dam, in particular, governs the water level in canals that connect the River Weser with the Rhine.

The Mohne Dam is the chief supply of water for industrial purposes in the Ruhr Valley. Another

Mankind Must Be Adequately Fed, Says Roosevelt Message

By Edward T. Folliard

Hot Springs, Va., May 18.—In quest of the third of the Four Freedoms—freedom from want—the United Nations conference on food and agriculture got under way here tonight, with representatives of 45 nations in attendance.

President Roosevelt, in a message to the conference, said that the nations must see to it that there are no "hindrances" to an adequately fed mankind after the war.

Never in this country's diplomatic history had there been such a cosmopolitan get-together. In the green-draped Empire Room of the Homestead Hotel, with its great array of United Nations flags, sat turbaned Indians, dark-skinned delegates from Ethiopia, hardy Icelanders, and delegates from all those nations which the Axis supposed had been conquered: Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Den-

Escort Carriers Scour Seas For U-Boats

By Leo Branham
Associated Press Staff Writer

A British Port, May 18.—Speedy, hard-hitting American-built escort aircraft carriers were disclosed officially today to be the newest United Nations countermeasure to the U-boat menace, and several of them are already at sea.

H. M. S. Battler—seen here after recent maneuvers and installations of additional British equipment—is one of the first of this new type. Built under lend-lease by the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corp. at Pascagoula, Miss., she was commissioned last October.

The carriers are expected to play an important part in guarding convoys, particularly in the mid-Atlantic blind spot beyond the range of shore-based patrol aircraft.

Observers immediately dismissed any idea that the Battler and others of her type were mere makeshifts created by twisting the funnel of a freighter and throwing up a trestled flight deck.

This is a real aircraft carrier comparing in almost every detail except size with her big sisters.

The Battler has seven decks and hangars for squadrons of fighters and torpedo bomber reconnaissance planes. There are workshops adequately fitted to turn out any replacement of machinery required.

There is not a rivet in the Battler. She is all-welded and constructed largely of prefabricated material. The only wooden part is the flight deck, 450 by 80 feet. The ship is 492 feet long. Her speed has not been disclosed.

The Battler's complement is 70 officers and 450 men, of whom 30 officers and 150 men belong to the fleet air arm. One squadron assigned to the vessel has already bagged 28 Nazi planes.

Congress Talk By Churchill To Range Far

50-Minute Speech Expected to Cover Whole Global War

By the Associated Press

Prime Minister Churchill's speech to Congress today will be one of the major addresses of his career, it was indicated last night when aides disclosed that he would speak for about 50 minutes.

All the four large American networks will broadcast his speech, starting at 12:30 p. m., Eastern war time.

Previously it had been indicated that he would speak for only about 29 minutes. The longer address will give him opportunity to cover the whole global war scene in considerable detail.

Senate and House will meet in joint session in the House chamber to hear the Prime Minister.

Meantime, Churchill continued his conferences with President Roosevelt. The latter told reporters yesterday that the talks are going along very satisfactorily, but are not quite finished.

The Prime Minister had lunch yesterday with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, visitors to the Capital. Later Churchill and the duke visited the White House, Mr. Roosevelt indicated later that they discussed the problem of bringing in several thousand farm laborers from the Bahamas, of which the duke is governor.

The President said Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, who arrived in Washington from Ottawa yesterday, had not yet joined his conferences with Churchill. He said King would be an overnight guest at the White House, however.

Mr. Roosevelt said he still thinks the Prime Minister will appear at one of his White House press conferences, but he does not know whether it will be Friday.

Crosby, Whose Voice Bats 1000, To Sing at War Bond Ball Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Songs in the night, by Bing Crosby, will be an added feature at Griffith Stadium next Monday when The Post stages its war bond baseball game between the Nats and the crack Norfolk Naval Training Station team.

America's No. 1 radio artist, whose famed baritone has introduced more hit songs than any other singer, yesterday telegraphed his acceptance of The Post's invitation to appear on the baseball show.

From home plate in the lighted stadium, Crosby will sing his songs. They will include, no doubt, his transcendant hit, "When the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day."

Crosby's appearances on war bond programs have carried him to every corner of the Nation, and he will be coming to Washington from Memphis, where Sunday he is appearing with Bob Hope in a bond drive golf exhibition.

The game committee hopes to prevail upon Crosby to sing others of his favorite numbers, including "As Time Goes By" and "Ballad

G. O. P. Trade Act Offer Fails As Senate Group Ends Hearing

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senate negotiations for a compromise of party differences on the reciprocal trade agreements bill collapsed last night as the Finance Committee ordered hearings ended today on the Administration's call for three-year, unamended extension of the law.

Republicans, through Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, offered to call off a fight for more restrictive amendments if the Administration would accept a single change in the law.

Under terms of the compromise Republicans would have abandoned their drive for congressional power to veto trade pacts in return for postwar authority for Congress to terminate any trade agreement by joint resolution.

The single alteration amounted to little more than restatement of existing congressional powers to repeal any law. Both Chairman Walter F. George of the Senate Finance Committee and the State Department are understood to have opposed the amendment on the grounds that even minor changes in established policy would impair United Nations morale.

Senator George said that although Congress now has authority to revoke trade agreements by joint resolution, to underline the fact in an amendment to the bill would be tantamount to serving notice that

Evacuee Billets Are Mapped In Event of D. C. Bombing

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

Billeting posts for Washington evacuees have already been chosen and marked as far west as Staunton, Va.—120 miles away—in the remote case that the District should become a theater of military operations, civilian defense authorities revealed last night.

Even though the chance that the Capital should ever know the fate of Paris or Rotterdam is viewed as exceedingly slim, that chance still has to be reckoned with, Joseph Sanders, chairman of the District Evacuation Authority said.

Accordingly, 20 counties in Virginia and Maryland are being surveyed as places of refuge. The capacities of bus lines, railroad lines, taxi streets and private automobiles to transport civilians are on file. Maps to guide them are already marked.

Capital Transit Co. inspectors are being organized to conduct convoys of refugees. Plans for feeding the evacuees at Red Cross stations along the way to the back counties are drawn up. Evacuation centers in the District for gathering, identifying and routing the civilians out of town have been designated in District schools. Even plans for medical examination and immunization of those about to set out are being worked out by the Health Department, and the plans of the Welfare Department are thought out to the detail of furnishing money for expenses along the way.

Inundation Cuts Reich's Rails, Canals

factor in ascertaining the blow to Germany is that many of the Reich's main railways in the west run through Duisburg and Dortmund, both in grave peril from flood. Most of the rail lines linking Germany proper with the invasion-threatened Low Countries and northern France go through these two cities.

While a water bed under the Ruhr is enough for drinking purposes, this source is not enough for industrial purposes and reservoirs have been one of the chief necessities in the valley. Without the Mohne Dam and the smaller Sorpe Dam, the intense industrialization of the area could not have been possible. The Sorpe was reported attacked by bombers, but whether it was broken could not be ascertained.

Parts of Kassel, an aircraft, U-boat, tank and artillery manufacturing town 35 miles downstream from the rapidly emptying Eder dam, are under water.

The inundation apparently extended widely into the surrounding soft coal country, where synthetic gasoline plants have been built recently to help feed the war machine.

Kassel itself is regarded as of such importance that the R. A. F. has concentrated bombing attacks there at least 10 times. The town is a key for rail links to Coblenz, Frankfurt, Munich, Leipzig, Dresden and Berlin and some of these lines as well as their power stations and bridges are completely submerged.

Although the water still is pouring through the great gap in the Eder Dam, the pictures showed that the flood crest has passed the upper reaches, leaving many of the structure's installations in silt-strewn ruins.

The northern section of the retaining basin between Hemfurth and Affoldern has been partly swept away and the power station at Affoldern still is under water.

The whole valley from Wabern to Felsberg, some 16 miles downstream from the dam, was shown to be still awash, with building tops jutting from the swirling water and rail lines and stations submerged.

Full Extent Not Yet Known

"Although the full extent of the floodng caused by the breach in the Mohne Dam is not yet known," the air ministry declared, "the water is spreading toward the center of the Ruhr. It must have covered a vast area by now, since the reservoir which contained 134 million tons of water is now nearly empty."

The damage at Froendenberg was shown to be heavy, with canal embankments wiped away, a power station isolated, railway and road bridges swept away and parts of them seen downstream. Passenger coaches were carried off a track nearby.

It was reported authoritatively here that unusually high water levels already were being recorded at the confluence of the Rhine and Ruhr Rivers at Duisburg.

The Berlin radio declared that "it may be stated that the damage caused has inflicted heavy losses to the civilian population but the war and economic damage is relatively light and can be repaired partly in a short time."

(C. B. S. Correspondent Howard K. Smith, reporting from Bern, Switzerland, said the flood waters already had inundated at least 54 towns and villages in the Ruhr Valley, leaving an estimated 50,000 families homeless.

(Estimating that the flood directly affected 120,000 families, the correspondent said the water had reached the outskirts of Duisburg.

(Quoting advices reaching Switzerland from across the German frontier, Smith said the German army had assigned an entire sapper division of 9000 men to rescue work. The first refugee train, packed to capacity, was said to have left Tuesday morning for the protectorate of Bohemia.)

The Morocco radio declared that rioting had broken out in the industrial center of Duisburg, Dortmund and other Ruhr Valley towns flooded by waters escaping from the Mohne Dam. The broadcast, quoting "well-informed inside sources," was recorded by Reuters.

It said Dortmund was threatened with complete inundation and that the number of dead and homeless was growing by the hour. Duisburg, bombed heavily and often by the R. A. F., was said to be the scene of chaos as water flooded the city's air raid shelters.

A Reuters Stockholm dispatch quoted a secret German radio as saying that a state of siege had been proclaimed throughout the province of Westphalia in the Ruhr Valley.

The Eder Dam, sometimes called the Waldeck Dam after the West Prussian district in which it is situated, was built in 1910-1914 in the velley west of Behlen. It confined a reservoir 17 miles long.

It served to maintain the level of the River Weser, which flows northward through Hanover to its estuary beyond Bremen, and also to feed the Dortmund-Ems Canal, a broad busy waterway that connects the Rhine with the Weser. The Eder Dam is at Hamfurth.

The Mohne Valley Dam lies a few miles south of Soest in Westphalia. It was built in 1908-1913. It formed a reservoir 6 miles long and 2 miles wide, which was also fed by the Soope River reservoir. The Mohne waters were locked off from the River Ruhr above Neheim.

Both dams were built primarily to provide for the enormous demands made on water supplies and hydroelectric power by the Ruhr district.

The Germans, in retailiation, struck back at London tonight for the second straight day. The first alert sounded shortly before midnight, and the second alarm came some time later. No planes, however, were able to penetrate the city's defenses, although one plane dropped a bomb in one outlying area. There was no immediate report of casualties.

In last night's raid, at least 10 persons were killed. A southwestern city, identified by the Berlin radio as Cardiff, suffered the heaviest raid since 1941.

The Eighth United States Air Force, whose heavy bombers pounded Bordeaux, Lorient and the submarine pens at Keroman yesterday, sent its Thunderbolt fighters to patrol Nazi-occupied Belgium in force today. They engaged one of two enemy formations sighted and shot down one Messerschmitt 109. A United States communique said one of the American P-47s failed to return.

British bombers attacked an enemy airport at Abbeville in France in another daylight foray today and their escorting fighters brought down a Focke-Wulf. Earlier in the day, R. A. F. Typhoons bombed a plane dispersal area at Poix but five of their planes were knocked down by intense antiaircraft fire.

These operations followed a heavy night operational schedule during which the R. A. F. hit eight Nazi blockade runners and shot up Continental rail lines and air bases.

the island, indicating that it was progressing to the high command's satisfaction.

Scouting parties made the first landing on Attu—at Blind Cove on Holtz Bay—followed by two landings in force. The major one of these was at Massacre Bay, at the southeastern corner of the Aleutian island, and the other on Holtz Bay.

After moving ashore under cover of naval bombardment, our Army troops moved inland, meeting stubborn" Japanese resistance from many machine-gun nests. The main Japanese positions are located along the southeastern shores of Holtz Bay on nearby Chichagof Harbor and on the high rocky ridge just to the south.

Our troops moved against these positions— the enemy apparently does not hold any other part of the 20-by-35-mile island in any force—from both the south and northwest. Until Monday, six days after the landing, the Japs still held all of the ridge that runs east and west across the island.

Part of Ridge Captured

Following the early Navy communique Secretary Knox announced that after the repulse of strong enemy counterattacks, our troops had captured part of the ridge—that in the area between the two arms of the top of Holtz Bay.

This advance, Knox said, brings the American troops which landed on Massacre Bay in direct contact with the main enemy force entrenched around Holtz Bay. There was no word yet that this United States force had joined hands with the other American troops attacking from our other beach-head.

But, declared Knox, the pincers were coming together.

Congress intends to revoke them.

George meanwhile scheduled a Senate committee vote today on the bill and all amendments, with indications pointing to a close margin on more than one proposed change in the bill.

Independent of the minority drive for amendments, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming will appear briefly before the committee this morning in support of his request that Congress be required to approve every trade pact before it takes effect. The same amendment was offered by O'Mahoney three years ago, and defeated by the Senate, 44 to 38.

The G. O. P. compromise amendment, prepared by ranking Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee, and approved by Minority Leader McNary, reads:

"Provided, that such agreements heretofore or hereafter concluded shall be revokable pursuant to a joint resolution of the Congress six months after cessation of hostilities, as proclaimed by the President."

Two-Year Plan Favored

The amendment was originally drafted by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan in conferences last week with Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Senator John A. Danaher of Connecticut and other Republican members of the Finance Committee. Minority members agreed to unite behind this proposal rather than McNary's earlier move for congressional power of veto.

The veto proposals were roundly trounced in the House where Republicans instead solidly supported extension of the act for two years instead of three. The two-year limitation was the only House restriction placed on the bill. In the Senate, Senator George will attempt to restore the original three-year extension.

Hitler Said to Expect The Loss of Norway

London, May 18 (INS).—Underground reports reaching London from inside Europe, quoted by the British radio today, declared that the Nazi high command has issued orders to army officers to draw up plans for the future that envisage the loss of Norway to the United Nations.

The orders stressed that the troops in Norway must "fight to the last man," and indicated that Hitler will be unable to send reinforcements.

Chinese Report Battle for Hunan Rice Continues

Chungking, May 18 (AP).—The battle for China's rice bowl continued unabated west of Lake Tungting in North Hunan Province, a Chinese communique said today.

In another battle second only in importance to the fight for rice, the Chinese claimed successes in the Taihenk Mountains, advancing to the outskirts of the important north Honan town of Linhsien, former stronghold which the Japanese captured early in their drive. The communique predicted Linhsien and other key points would be receovered in a day or two.

An army spokesman's statement, accompanying the communique, branded as "purely groundless" a Japanese claim that Gen. Pang Ping-hsun and his 70,000 men had surrendered to the Japanese in the Taiheng Mountains.

Cox Yanks Rogers' Hair in Argument

But did you see him?"

Then he supplied this version of the encounter, slipping, under the stress of the moment, into a vernacular made famous by his father:

"I am a' sitting there, listening to the debate and Mr. Cox comes over. He was not his calm and deliberate self. And then, well, I was not able to get my explanation in."

Later he asserted:

"I want to state again that I did not say Mr. Cox accepted a bribe. "I want to reenforce that statement most emphatically . . .

"I have mentioned Mr. Cox in some radio addresses, but I don't know which one. I expect to see him in a calmer moment, find out what he objected to and iron this out in a more deliberative fashion."

British Subs Sink 5 Boats, 1 Destroyer

Italian Shipping Hit in Wide Sweep Over Mediterranean

By the Associated Press

London, May 18.—The Admiralty announced today that British submarines ranging the length of the Mediterranean in continuing attacks on enemy shipping and shore targets have sunk at least five more supply ships and an Italian destroyer and have shot up a railway port terminal in Greece.

Several other ships were damaged in the same series of attacks by torpedo and deck gunfire.

It was disclosed that the British submarines are audaciously penetrating enemy harbors along the "underbelly of Europe" when they can find no more prey in the open seas.

The submarine attacks on the mainland called for passage among the many islands of the Aegean Sea to a point on the Eastern Greek shore below Salonika. Of this raid the Admiralty said:

"The railway at Platamon in the gulf of Thessalonik (Salonika) was bombarded successfully and hits were scored by gunfire on two small supply ships lying at anchor."

The Italian destroyer was sunk off the north coast of Sicily. Near Palermo a large supply ship under heavy escort, a medium supply vessel and a small one were torpedoed. A heavy explosion occurred in the big one but the submarine had to duck the escort before observing final results which probably were satisfactory, for the escort was seen searching an otherwise empty sea an hour later. The small ship was definitely sunk off Palermo.

In one Aegean Sea action off the southern coast of Greece a British submarine shelled a small supply ship to the bottom and a sub-chaser was hit five times before action was broken off.

Another submarine destroyed two small supply ships off the Asinara Islands of northern Sardinia, and then went into the harbor of Porto Torres to torpedo and sink a medium size supply vessel.

In the western Mediterranean a British submarine engaged in a running gun fight with an Italian ship, inflicting several hits before action was broken off when the Italian took refuge in Spanish waters.

Women Halt Nazi Trains In France

By the Associated Press

London, May 18.—Laying their bodies across the tracks in front of locomotives, the wives and daughters of Frenchmen drafted for German labor have almost halted the deportations to the Reich, Fernand Grenier, former Communist deputy who has joined the Fighting French, declared today.

"The latest Vichy reports admit that between 50 and 80 per cent of the workers conscripted for German factories failed to go," he said.

Grenier gave a full account of activities of French guerillas in the last three months and produced a sheaf of underground newspapers printed in France to document his remarks.

Invasion Day Planned

He said the recently organized Council of French resistance, embracing underground organizations, had disseminated an "invasion day" plan to be set in operation the moment the Allies strike.

The instructions include these points:

1. Notification that all separate resistance organizations have been unified under a central authority.

2. Mobilization starts the instant the Allies land and "arms will be supplied to all at that moment."

3. All economic and industrial activities throughout France must be paralyzed by a general strike.

4. Should Vichy military or police forces attempt to hinder Allied or resistance operations "they must be killed forthwith or taken prisoner."

Jails to Be Opened

5. Prisons and jails must be opened, releasing political prisoners.

6. All public buildings, including railway depots and radio stations, must be occupied immediately.

7. All Vichy officials, regardless of rank and function, must be replaced by known representatives of the resistance parties.

Grenier said the Council of Resistance represents "no less than 90 per cent" of all able-bodied men and women in France.

Guerrillas, now fully organized and trained by former army officers, are concentrating on wrecking the German-controlled transport system of France, and between January and May destroyed 180 locomotives and seriously damaged another 112, he reported.

During the same period 17 interruptions of service on the main lines for not less than 48 hours, and 75 stoppages of 36 hours or less were reported in the underground press. Two fully laden German troop trains were said to have been derailed and machinegunned so that "not a person escaped."

Corporal, Sweetie Talk LongDistance From Next Booth

Fort Huachuca, Ariz., May 18 (AP).—Corpl. Wilford Romije placed a long distance telephone call to New York and got his girl on the line.

"Darling, I would give anything to see you," he said.

"And I want to see you, too, my sweet," came the reply.

When they rung up they stepped from adjoining booths and met face to face.

He hadn't told her he was coming home from Fort McClellan, Ala. Meanwhile, learning her brother stationed here had been injured, she huried out from New York.

Upon her arrival she telephoned her mother back home and while they were talking, Romije's call came in. The girl's mother took his call on another telephone, placed the two instruments together and let the couple carry on from there.

British Make Commando Raid on Burma Port

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, May 18.—British troops who withdrew last week from Maungdaw in western Burma to meet a Japanese infiltration threat struck back at the port in a commando-type raid Sunday night and inflicted casualties on the enemy in hand-to-hand fighting.

Two small detachments made a landing despite strong Japanese resistance, a communique announced today, and killed all but two of a force of 20 Japanese who charged at bayonet point. Two British raiders were listed as killed in the sharp engagement.

The purpose of the raid was not disclosed, nor was any indication given as to how far the British had withdrawn toward the border of India, which is 10 miles from Maungdaw.

(The Tokyo radio announced belatedly that Japanese troops had occupied Maungdaw. An imperial headquarters communique said 6404 enemy dead had been buried on the Arakhan Front in Burma from the latter part of December to May 10.)

R. A. F. bombers were reported to have attacked Japanese radio installations near Aqyab yesterday and to have bombed the village of Gudanyin. Hurricane fighters sank three Japanese barges and four supply sampans on the Mayu River, while Wellington medium bombers raided a Japanese airfield at Kangaung and targets at Yenagyaung and Rathidaung.

Chiang Praises Christian Church

Chungknig, May 18 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek praised the Christian Church and its missionaries in China today and said the "abolition of unequal treaties had freed the Christian Church from all association with foreign imperialism or aggression."

In an address to the opening session of the First National Christian Conference held since the outbreak of the war, the Chinese leader said:

"We still need them (the missionaries) and welcome Christians from other lands who serve the people of China with true sympathy and devotion. Dont feel you are guests. You are comrades working with us to save our people and build a new nation."

Chiang and his wife are Methodists.

Novorossisk Blows by Nazis Thrown Back

By the Associated Press

London, (Wednesday) May 18.—After having thrown back and inflicted heavy losses on Germans attempting to crack the Red army's seige lines around the Caucasus Black Sea base of Novorossisk, Russian troops blasted the enemy with artillery fire Tuesday in a day of relative quiet along the entire Eastern Front, Moscow announced today.

The Russian noon-day communique Tuesday reported that the Red army had beaten off a series of violent counterattacks at Novorossisk during the night. It was the second successive bulletin disclosing German attempts to break out of their narrow bridgehead.

The Red air force again ranged the entire front, destroying or damaging at least 30 German motor trucks carrying troops and supplies, said the midnight communique recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

There was a spurt of activity near Leningrad, where Soviet regular and guerilla forces killed about 400 enemy officers the late bulletin said.

The recent relative quiet continues to stir speculation that either one or both sides is preparing for a big offensive to be launched soon.

A Transocean dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio said:

"The momentary pause in fighting on the Eastern Front is not likely to last long, in the opinion of German military quarters, since the lull is being used by the enemy to bring up fresh troops and material. German air scouts report large concentrations of enemy troops not only in the south at Kuban bridgehead (of the Caucasus) but also in the center (Moscow) area and in the north before Leningrad."

6 Hurt in Peoria Fire

Peoria, Ill., May 18 (AP).—Six firemen were injured late last night and early today when a fire and a series of five explosions of undetermined origin destroyed three buildings and damaged two others in Peoria's central business district. Damage was estimated unofficially to be more than $600,000.

Terror Drive Seen in Mercy Ship Sinking

By Willard Hahn

International News Service Staff Writer

United Nations Headquarters in Australia, May 18.—Sinking of the Australian hospital ship Centaur by a Japanese submarine 40 miles from Brisbane gave rise to speculation tonight that the Japs are planning an all-out campaign against all Allied hospital ships in the Pacific.

Reason for the Centaur's torpedoing could not be explained otherwise by observers here, who pointed out that the Japs had a perfect opportunity to attack the big hospital liner Oranje in Milne Bay last August, but at that time observed the nonbelligerent status of the mercy vessel.

During the second night of the Jap landing attempt at Milne Bay, a Jap cruiser came into the bay and shelled Allied positions from behind the protective cover of the hospital ship, which was moored in the harbor, but the enemy scrupulously avoided firing on the Oranje.

It was pointed out that the Jap submarine that sank the Centaur, killing 268 patients and medical attendants, could have had no doubt of the ship's nonbelligerency. The Centaur, carrying medical personnel only, was unescorted and unarmed and was fully illuminated from stem to stern, with brilliantly lighted Red Crosses amidships and on its funnel.

The Centaur was en route from Port Moresby, New Guinea, to Sydney, Australia, when the Jap torpedo struck without warning at 4 a. m. Friday. Only 64 aboard survived.

Australian Prime Minister John Curtin announced in Canberra that he immediately dispatched a protest to Japan about the sinking, which he said "bears all the marks of wantonness and deliberation."

Slowdowns Of Dutch Bring Death Decree

By the Associated Press

London, May 18.—A new decree setting the death penalty for "severe cases" of strikes or slowdowns was reported from Holland today, while from France and Yugoslavia came fresh news of resistance to the Axis overlords.

Arthur Seysz-Inquart, German commissioner for occupied Holland, has decreed that strikes or reduced output "in the public services" would be punished "in severe cases" with penal servitude or death, the Dutch news agency Aneta reported.

It added the order applied to physicians, veterinary surgeons, dentists and druggists as well as to workers, and that strikes and slow-downs of many kinds followed the German order for reinternment of 40,000 former Dutch soldiers.

The Yugoslav government-in-exile reported that Yugoslav guerillas had seized the important mining town of Veronik last Friday after a seven-hour battle, and destroyed a power plant and mine installations.

In reprisal, Hungarian occupation units took severe measures against the local population, the government added.

(A London radio broadcast heard by C. B. S. in New York said a Polish underground leader had reported that "there are more than 35,000 Polish patriots working against Germany" and carrying out sabotage.)

Ruml Bill Loses; Tax Plans Are Riddled

Knutson's motion was the most "amusing, unreasonable, fantastic, and absurd proposal" ever made in the House. It was an attempt, Doughton told Knutson, "to stand on your head and turn yourself wrong side out."

Doughton, jubilant after his floor battle, told reporters that there was "no chance for a Ruml bill while Franklin Roosevelt is President of the United States." But he would not say what he would seek in the conference. "We'll try to bring out the best we can," he said.

Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Finance Committee, announced plans for tomorrow's conference and said that his interpretation of the parliamentary status was that "anything is open to the conferees."

George said it was "obvious" that if a bill is to come out it would be "something less than 100 per cent abatement of one year's liability." George said that he still believed that abating 75 per cent of one year's tax for everyone, carrying the remaining 25 per cent over two years, would be a "reasonable compromise." House leaders once sought such a compromise, and there were strong indications they might consider going back to it.

The conference members for the House are Doughton and Knutson, Representatives Cooper (Democrat) of Tennessee, Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma and Dingell (Democrat) of Tennessee, Reed (Republican) of New York and Jenkins (Republican) of Ohio.

Senate members are George Walsh of Massachusetts, Connally of Texas, and Clark of Missouri (Democrats) and Vandenberg of Michigan, Davis of Pennsylvania and Danaher of Connecticut (Republicans).

14-Floor Leap Fails to Foil Chicago Police

Chicago, May 18 (INS).—Robert A. McDonald, 28, secretary and confidante of Washington Porter II, art connoisseur and former secretary of the American Legation at Denmark, was recovering tonight after leaping from a fourteenth floor window.

McDonald, who struggled from the arms of a detective and plunged from the window facing an inner court, crashed through a heavy screen and came to rest on a skylight from where he made his was to a fifth floor ledge. He suffered only a broken leg and contusions.

McDonald was taken into custody on a bad check charge.

Caleb Milne 4th Killed in Africa

New York, May 18 (AP).—Caleb Milne 4th, 30-year-old member of a wealthy Philadelphia textile manufacturing family, who in 1935 admitted a kidnaping hoax that caused a two-State FBI manhunt, was killed May 11 in Tunisia where he served as an ambulance driver, it was announced today by the American Field Service.

Milne, son of Maj. and Mrs. Caleb Milne 3d, Woodstock, N. Y., was struck by a mortar shell while tending two wounded men and died later in a dressing station. He had been attached to the British Eighth Army.

Ickes Won't Bypass WLB in Lewis Case

collective bargaining may not be resumed until Lewis appears before WLB for further instructions. The board acted after reports appeared that Ickes was prepared to settle the dispute through negotiation if the War Labor Board would give him the opportunity.

The letter to Lewis expressed appreciation for Lewis' action extending the 15-day coal strike truce until May 31 at Ickes request. The extension was arranged after Lewis defied the War Labor Board by refusing to appear at a hearing to arrange for the resumption of collective bargaining. Because of Lewis' defiance, WLB forbade the operators to bargain collectively with the miners and made it clear that it did not believe any other Government agency had jurisdiction over the case.

"I am somewhat doubtful, however," Ickes wrote Lewis, "by the language of your telegram attributing to me the hope that I would be able to institute immediately collective bargaining conferences. I am anxious that there be no misunderstanding between us.

"As I told you at our conference on Sunday, May 2, (when the first 15-day truce was arranged), the President's Executive Order (taking over the mines) does not give me the power to negotiate a contract with the United Mine Workers, nor do I have the power to institute collective bargaining conferences between the mine workers and the owners of the mines.

"In addition," he emphasized, "as I have said from the beginning, any contract must have the approval of the War Labor Board."

Since Lewis has made it clear that he does not plan to participate in collective bargaining conferences under the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board even though he was ready to participate in such conferences under Ickes' supervision, observers believed that WLB was now left with no alternative but to complete action on the case and issue an order in settlement of the dispute.

Its three-man coal panel was at work yesterday preparing its report to the board which should be ready by weekend. Express instructions have been given to the panel by the board to report only facts, without making any recommendations, it was learned. WLB officials expect to have a final decision some time before the present truce expires.

WLB Sees Menace

WLB viewed any action by Ickes to settle the case as a threat to its existence since such an action would enable Lewis, who has repeatedly defied the board, to secure special treatment.

Asked about Ickes' letter to Lewis, Chairman Davis said that "I think it is very satisfactory." Other board officials indicated they believed the board had passed another crisis in its stormy existence. Several members were ready to resign if Lewis succeeded in bypassing the board.

Prescription for Morale:
Think of Your Victory Motor Trip!

It's a blessed relief just to putter around fixing up the trailer more efficient-like... and sort of pipe-dreaming where you're going. But will you need a new car? All reports say it will be a long time after Peace before you can hope to get one. Be ready to go—in your present car...and why can't you?

Since rationing began you've probably "saved" more car-mileage than you ever made on your grandest tour. After Victory you'll have those "stored-up" miles to use, especially if you don't allow present restrictions to cause acid-damage. Vicious acids are formed by normal combustion in any engine. When it stops it's an acid trap. It used to get rid of acids fairly well by warming up on long fast runs. But now it often "just sits" with those acids inside, and what can you do?

You can have your engine OIL-PLATED internally to combat acid corrosion... much as outer parts are chromium-plated to combat water's corrosive effect. All it takes to OIL-PLATE your engine is the change to Conoco Nth motor oil. Patented Nth oil seemingly "magnetizes" OIL-PLATING to metal—much longer than just temporarily.

This steadfast OIL-PLATING, joined direct to inner engine surfaces without all draining down to the crankcase while standing, is your shield against acid. Now when even new parts are scarce—let alone new cars—you'll cast off a big worry for the present and future by having your engine OIL-PLATED. Just change to Nth oil—at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company

CONOCO Nth MOTOR OIL

Mr. Churchill, DROP THE MANDATE!

Goebbels has proclaimed Nazi determination to "destroy the Jews without mercy." What was previously considered a "secret order" is now officially confirmed by Hitler's propaganda chief. The apostles of hate and terrorism have decided upon the total extermination of European Jewry.

The Jewish tragedy has reached its peak. But the United Nations do nothing to save the Jews. The impression is being fostered that even some of the democratic spokesmen would shed no tears if Hitler "solved" Europe's Jewish problem in his own way. This impression gains strength by Britain's policy with regard to Palestine.

Winston Churchill is now in Washington. Shortly before his arrival he announced Britain's intentions to uphold the White Paper of 1939. It is this White Paper which consigned the Jews of Palestine to a permanent minority status, the Jews of Europe to eternal homelessness, the Jews of the world to everlasting dispersion. It is this White Paper about which the same Mr. Churchill in a speech in Parliament on May 23rd, 1939, said as follows:

> "What is that but the destruction of the Balfour Declaration? What is that but a breach of faith? What is it but a one-sided denunciation—a unilateral denunciation of an engagement?"

Thus spoke Churchill, when he was one of the 602 Members of Parliament, and voted against the White Paper. Churchill, the Prime Minister, sticks to the White Paper. We do not believe that Mr. Churchill has become an enemy of the Jewish people. He is a man of firm convictions and deep insight, and it is not likely that he has changed his attitude toward the cause of the martyred people of Israel. What we do believe is that Mr. Churchill finds himself under the overpowering pressure of the die-hards of the Colonial Office who, even in the face of this global revolution, refuse to relinquish in the slightest degree their outworn imperialistic policies.

For twenty-five years the Colonial Office has hampered and obstructed the Jewish effort in Palestine. It placed drastic restrictions on Jewish immigration. It barred the Jews from buying land. It denied them the right to self-defense. It handed over the Palestine administration to officials hostile to Zionist aspirations. In the words of Lord Josiah Wedgwood, one of Britain's most outspoken statesmen, broadcasting from London, last May:

> "The whole administration in Palestine, from the top to the police, are against the half million Jews of Palestine. They will never let them have arms, nor land, nor free immigration, nor a refuge, nor a home. Never!"

This is strikingly evident now. If Winston Churchill can turn his eyes from an ocean of Jewish blood in Europe, if he can advocate in 1943 the "breach of faith," which he so sharply condemned in 1939—there is nothing the Jews can expect from Britain. The Jews and their friends in the free world are forced to the only possible conclusion:

Britain Must Give Up The Mandate!

Palestine does not belong to Britain. It is an international trust in Britain's hands with a Mandate to establish a Jewish National Home, to "facilitate Jewish immigration and close settlement on the land." Britain has failed to discharge the trust. Therefore—

Mr. Churchill, Drop the Mandate!

The Jewish people have waited long enough. It can wait no longer. It can no longer entrust its fate to a mandatory which has violated all its pledges. It must follow the advice given by Lord Wedgwood, a year ago:

> "You must turn to America and take on the job yourselves. Ask no more from Britain. There is no longer any hope from any British administration.
> "I have tried to save for my own countrymen the glory of rebuilding Jerusalem—of doing justice and creating freedom. It's no use. They won't do it!
> "Seek to get America to act—to press for arms and justice—to accept the mandate—to build another free land with open doors and open hearts."

We now follow Lord Wedgwood's advice, and say in all earnest:

Mr. Churchill, Drop the Mandate!

Acceptance of the mandate by the United States would be greeted with enthusiasm by the Jews the world over. All European nations concerned with the Jewish question would welcome an American Mandate over Palestine.

Or, the Mandate might be turned over to a group of powers as recently suggested by Madame Chiang Kai-shek. If the system of mandates is to be abolished, the Jewish people will be ready to take upon itself the responsibility of governing and upbuilding the country. In either of these cases, Jews desperately in need of refuge would find there "a land with open doors and open hearts."

THIS IS NOT ALONE A JEWISH PROBLEM. Certainly, it is not a British problem. It is a world problem that must be solved for the benefit of all the peoples of the world.

In the name of countless Jewish martyrs, in the name of the common interests of humanity, in the name of all ideals for which millions are today shedding their blood—

Mr. Churchill, Drop The Mandate!

Mass Today Begins Msgr. Riordan Rites

MONSIGNOR RIORDAN

Requiem high mass will be sung today at 7:30 a. m. at St. Martin's Catholic Church, North Capitol and T Streets Northwest, for the Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Riordan, for 20 years pastor, who died yesterday at the rectory after a lingering illness. The Rev. S. McCabe, assistant pastor of St. Martin's, will be celebrant.

At 83, he was the oldest priest in age and point of service in the Baltimore and Washington archdioceses. He celebrated his last mass November 8, 1942.

A solemn high requiem mass, especially for the parish children and friends, will be celebrated tomorrow at 9 a. m. by the Rev. Louis Miltenberger. The Holy Cross College choir will sing.

Funeral Mass Friday

The Right Rev. Msgr. Charles R. O'Hara, rector of Holy Comforter Parish here, will cerebrate solemn high funeral mass Friday at 10:30 a. m., with interment following in Mount Olivet Cemetery. The body will lie in state until tomorrow at 7 p. m., when it will be taken to the church, to remain until the funeral hour.

Monsignor Riordan was born in Allegany County, Md., in 1860, the son of Owen Riordan, mining engineer.

He passed a West Point entrance examination in 1878, but in 1879 went to St. Charles' College, Ellicott City, Md., to begin priesthood studies. From 1883 to 1888, he studied at the American College in Rome, where he was ordained to the priesthood in St. Peter's.

He was pastor of St. Mary's, Barnesville, Md., from 1888 to 1899; of St. Charles', Pikesville, Md., from 1899 to 1914, and of Immaculate Conception Parish here from 1914 to 1923, when he came to St. Martin's. Under his guidance, St. Martin's has become among the most important parishes in both archdioceses. Father Miltenberger said yesterday that the priest "had never left a parish in debt."

Made Domestic Prelate

In the spring of 1938, when the priest was nearing the golden jubilee of his ordination, he was elevated to the rank of domestic prelate by Pope Pius XI. He was the late Cardinal Gibbons' official representative at the eucharistic congress in Madrid in 1909. Cardinal Gibbons recognized the priest's legal talents, so the latter undertook the task of revising the legal statutes of the archdiocese. He also compiled a history of the Baltimore Cathedral and the Baltimore archidiocese.

Monsignor Riordan is survived by two nieces and two nephews—Mrs. P. J. Curran, Steubenville, Ohio; Mrs. L. B. Whitworth, Asheville, N. C.; John Naughton, Westernport, Md., and Owen Naughton, Georgia.

Father Miltenberger said yesterday that the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, and the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese, will not be able to attend the funeral services. The former is ill and the latter is holding confirmations in western Maryland.

Mrs. Dewey Works As Hospital Aide

Albany, N. Y., May 18 (AP).—Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey is working 3 hours a day as a volunteer at the Albany City Hospital, the Governor's office disclosed today; and has been on duty 10 days.

Her present assignment, the announcement added, is in the operating room, where the State's first lady and other volunteers clean instruments, roll bandages and prepare sutures.

Community Fund Changes Name to United War Chest

Conforming with a presidential order to merge fund-raising drives into a National War Fund, the Community War Fund has changed its name to United War Chest, E. C. Graham, chairman, announced yesterday.

The change of name was decided upon by the board of directors because of the formation of State-wide fund-raising organizations all over the country to be called United War Chest, and will not mean a change of policy.

"Each of the State-wide United War Chests will work in cooperation with the National War Fund," Graham said, "and every fall the campaign of every major organization except the Red Cross will be combined through the United War Chests throughout the country."

House Group Urged to Offer Penal Reform

Attorney General Biddle yesterday urged a House Judiciary subcommittee to undertake sweeping reform of the Nation's penal system, by giving a 10-member Federal board authority to suggest revisions in the sentences handed out by Federal judges, and to provide special care for youthful convicts.

Appearing with Biddle to support the legislation were Federal Circuit Judges John J. Parker of Charlotte, N. C., and Orie L. Phillips of Denver, Colo. and former Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania.

Regarded "Sore Spot"

Parker, chairman of a committee which drafted the legislation for the Judicial Conference of Senior Circuit Judges, said that it was designed to hit one of the most important remaining "sore spots"—the problem of Federal sentencing for crimes. The problem arose, he said, because judges now have difficulty gaining the necessary knowledge about the criminal defendant upon which to base a sentence, and because there is "absolute lack of coordination" between sentencing and paroling authorities.

The proposed legislation, Parker explained, would work these changes. The new board would be set up, replacing the present Federal Parole Board, with its 10 members appointed by the Attorney General. Within six months from the time a district judge sentenced a prisoner to a term of more than one year, a board member would interview the prisoner, review his case and whatever information about him had been gained during his time in prison, and recommend any change it believed necessary in the length of the sentence. Its recommendation would go back to the judge, who, in turn, could accept it, reject it, or let it become effective without his indorsement.

Death Penalty Excepted

An offender up to 24 years old could be treated at the discretion of the judge as a "youthful offender," a move which would entitle him to special treatment aimed primarily at cutting short his possible crime career, and steering him back into useful citizenship. In dealing with any youthful offender, the board would have authority to order his discharge from prison at any time, so long as it continued to supervise him for a year. It would have to let a youthful offender go conditionally at the end of four years, and unconditionally at the end of six years.

Excepted from the special treatment would be anyone whose offense was punishable by death.

Hearing Continues

Parker read a letter from Chief Justice Stone of the Supreme Court indorsing the plan as providing a "substantial improvement over prevailing methods," but he said that the measure was opposed by some members of the Federal bench, including Justices Harold M. Stephens of the United States Court of Appeals for the District, and District Court Justices David A. Pine, and James M. Proctor.

Attorney General Biddle pointed out that under the present system the only way to correct excessive sentences is by executive clemency.

Biddle said there was "no doubt that juvenile crime is increasing," and said "it seems to me this is the time for passage of this bill."

Chairman Walter (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, subcommitttee chairman, announced that the hearing would continue at 10 a. m. today.

Food Conference Opens at Hot Springs

First of Many Parleys

This, it was made clear, was but the first of many conferences in which the United Nations would seek through cooperation to shape a better postwar world.

"This is the first United Nations conference," the President's message said. "Together, we are fighting a common enemy. Together, also, we are working to build a world in which men shall be free to live out their lives in peace, prosperity and security."

Judge Marvin Jones, head of the United States delegation, who was unanimously elected permanent chairman of the food conference, said in a speech opening the conference that this was the "forerunner of other conferences which unquestionably will have a part in shaping the postwar world in which freedom again will rule."

In a remark that recalled the period when the United States went in for an economy of scarcity, plowing under crops and killing baby pigs, Judge Jones said that what we had called surpluses were really not surpluses at all. What caused them, he said, was a defect in the world's system of distribution and the inability of the masses to purchase the food they needed.

Honor Paid to China

Heroic China, first country to feel the savage might of the Axis, was paid a signal honor when she, of all the 44 foreign nations represented here, was selected to provide an orator to respond to Judge Jones on behalf of the delegates.

He was Kuo Ping-Wen, China's Vice Minister of Finance.

Minister Kuo said that China, 80 per cent of whose 450 million people are engaged in farming, had made a beginning in applying scientific methods to food and agriculture.

Kuo said that it would be too much to expect that this conference could settle all the difficult problems relating to food and agriculture. He added, however, that the delegates could agree on some general principles and plans for the setting up of suitable machinery to carry forward the work of the conference.

Herve Alphand, French inspector of finance, who heads the French delegation here, approved the rule that English should be the official language of the conference.

Reporters Invited

The 50 or so newspaper reporters here were invited this afternoon to a reception given by the American delegation to the delegates. It was held in the Crystal Room of the huge Georgian colonial hotel, and it was something to see as men from all corners of the globe rubbed elbows and sipped their cocktails, and a string quartet filled the place with soothing melody.

The delegates, including diplomats from Washington's embassy row who have long had dealings with reporters here, seemed eager to talk to the representatives of the fourth estate. They even did a little buttonholing themselves. When the party was over, the rule which President Roosevelt clamped on the conference forbidding newspapermen to see delegates in the Homestead seemed more absurd than ever.

President's Message

The text of President Roosevelt's letter, read to the United Nations Food Conference tonight by Judge Jones, follows:

In your capacity as chairman of the United States delegation, and as temporary chairman of the United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture, will you convey to the delegates assembled my heartfelt regret that I cannot be present in person to welcome them upon this historic occasion. Urgent matters in the prosecution of the war make it impossible for me to attend; and until we have won the unconditional surrender of our enemies, the achievement of victory must be pressed above all else.

Nevertheless, I hope that later I shall be able to meet the delegates and express to them personally my profound conviction of the importance of the task on which they are about to embark.

This is the first United Nations conference. Together, we are fighting a common enemy. Together, also, we are working to build a world in which men shall be free to live out their lives in peace, prosperity and security.

The broad objectives for which we work have been stated in the Atlantic Charter, the declaration of United Nations, and at the meeting of the 21 American republics at Rio de Janeiro in January, 1942. It is the purpose of this conference to consider how best to further these policies insofar as they concern the consumption, production and distribution of food and other agricultural products in the postwar period.

Nations' Responsibilities

"We know that in the world for which we are fighting and working the four freedoms must be won for all men. We know, too, that each freedom is dependent upon the others; that freedom from fear, for example, cannot be secured without freedom from want. If we are to succeed, each nation individually, and all nations collectively, must undertake these responsibilities:

They must take all necessary steps to develop world food production so that it will be adequate to meet the essential nutritional needs of the world population. And they must see to it that no hindrances, whether of international trade, of transportation or of internal distribution, be allowed to prevent any nation or group of citizens within a nation from obtaining the food necessary for health. Society must meet in full its obligation to make available to all its members at least the minimum adequate nutrition.

The problems with which this conference will concern itself are the most fundamental of all human problems—for without food and clothing life itself is impossible.

In this and other United Nations conferences we shall be extending our collaboration from war problems into important new fields. Only by working together can we learn to work together, and work together we must and will.

Dr. Pugh Nominated to Head Chaplain Board

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Dr. William Barrow Pugh of Philadelphia, Pa., well known in Washington religious circles, has been nominated general chairman of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, succeeding Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, it was learned last night.

DR. PUGH

However, Dr. Pugh has not yet accepted the nomination, it was said at the commission's office in the Woodward Building here.

Dr. Pugh is Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (Northern) and vice president of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains.

Appointment of someone to continue Bishop Leonard's tour of the fighting fronts for American Protestantism is a moot question, and probably will be discussed when the general commission holds its quarterly and biennial meeting here June 9. The prelate died May 3 in an Iceland plane crash.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, retired Washington Methodist prelate, may be asked to serve the unexpired term of Bishop Leonard as Washington resident bishop.

Methodist bishops generally are appointed at the jurisdictional conferences, and the next conference of the northeastern jurisdiction, of which Washington is a part, will not be until after the next Methodist General Conference in June, 1944.

New Navy Casualties

The Navy yesterday announced nine casualties, none from this area including 4 dead and 5 missing.

This brings to 23,978 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7224 dead, 4688 wounded and 12,066 missing.

Songwriters' Agency Seeks to Lift Fraud Order

A bill of complaint to enjoin Postmaster General Frank C. Walker from enforcing a fraud order against the Hollywood Recording Studios of Los Angeles, Calif., was filed yesterday in District Court.

The concern is described in the complaint as promoting the sale of songs of would-be songwriters and with charging a fee for the recording of songs.

The Government charged the company had an office only for the purpose of handling the correspondence of their mail order business and that they did not maintain a recording studio, and that no staff was employed for the sale of songs to publishers.

Victory canning is food insurance

Though conserving on canned goods alters our food buying somewhat, it's no time to slight the nutritional standards of our menus. That's why canning foods at home is becoming a major kitchen industry. Foresightedness now means better nutrition, better menus, and more food enjoyment later on.

If you're a first-timer, and there will be many this year, there's no reason to be overwhelmed at the prospect of home canning. Just remember that there are rules to be followed, and if these rules are adhered to carefully, then there should be no difficulty.

GET THE LATEST INFORMATION—Old hands at canning as well as beginners should look to the newest information and material on canning for their rules. Grandmother's methods were all right for her day, but new discoveries about vitamins, minerals, and other nutritional facts have outmoded information of even a few seasons back. So, just as you wouldn't follow an outmoded pattern for making a dress, neither should you follow outdated directions for home canning.

CLEANLINESS AND STERILIZATION—One of the first and most important rules in home canning is cleanliness and sterilization. It is not too much to say that you should be almost fanatical on this point if you don't want to lose foods through spoilage. That's why we recommend that canning be done in small lots rather than all at once.

Sterilization includes the equipment, jars, lids, and the food itself. The bacteria and yeasts which ruin foods must be destroyed in the canning and processing if the food is to keep and be safe to eat.

Non-acid vegetables, (which means all vegetables except tomatoes and peppers) fish, poultry, and meats (all of which are non-acid foods) HAVE to be heated to a temperature of 240°F. to 250°F.—far above the boiling point (212°F.)—in order to destroy the organisms which cause botulism (food poisoning) and other types of spoilage. That is why it is imperative that a pressure cooker be used for the sterilization of these foods. However, it is not necessary to have a pressure cooker in order to can fruits, tomatoes, and peppers.

WHEN TO CAN — Can foods when they are in full season. It is more economical then. And can them at their peak of freshness, too, to capture all their vitamins and minerals.

Cabinet Meetings Without Plan

CERTAIN Senators who have been working backstage for a streamlined "war Cabinet" got some interesting ammunition when they cross-examined one of the President's close associates at a closed-door committee meeting.

They learned that Cabinet meetings, except for an increase in the number of participants, still are being conducted on an informal, cracker barrel basis, with no plan or system.

The weekly meetings are conducted without an agenda. Cabinet officers and agency heads never know what will be discussed from week to week, frequently come unprepared for policy questions that affect them.

Senators who have been digging into the matter feel that the White House secretariat should contact department and agency heads several days before a Cabinet meeting to learn what problems they want to discuss with the President. On the basis of this, as well as matters the President himself intends to bring up, an advance memorandum could be prepared and distributed before the meeting.

Besides regular Cabinet officers, there are usually a dozen other top Government officials at White House sessions, including Harry Hopkins, Manpower Chief Paul McNutt, WPB Chief Donald Nelson, Farm Czar Chester Davis, Economic Stabilizer James Byrnes, Admiral William D. Leahy.

Time was when disputes between departments and agencies were ironed out at a Cabinet meeting, but not now. Even disputes affecting major military and domestic policies are passed over. Favorite trick of department heads, who have a ticklish matter on their minds, is to wait until the meeting is finished, then pass a note to the President stating their particular problem, with a request for a private audience.

This technique was originated by military and naval spokesmen who frankly state that they do not wish to air their troubles at a meeting attended by so many people. However, this means a line of Cabinet officers waiting their turn to talk to the Chief as they file out of the Cabinet Room, and usually other Cabinet members don't know what their colleagues have talked about.

Wallace Program

MANY a housewife is already planning to work over the canning jars at the end of the victory garden season. But Mrs. Henry A. Wallace has different plans.

She and the Vice President are producing vegetbles in their victory garden at the Swiss Legation, but the process of putting them up for the winter will be different.

Mrs. Wallace has a dehydrator. Her husband got it for her, because he likes the latest inventions, and wanted to see how it would work.

The dehydrator takes the water out of the vegetables, leaves them in a condition for keeping all winter. It has the double advantage of being an easier and cooler process of preserving. Also the product takes less space than the rows of jars.

NOTE: The Wallaces have planted a lot of tomatoes, plus a variety of seeds the Vice President brought back from South America. On the same day he returned, Henry planted the seeds which Latin friends had given him.

Dies Faces Red

ONE piece of inside evidence has just leaked out regarding Frederick Schuman, foreign broadcast analyst of the Federal Communications Commission, who was tarred as a "red" by the Dies Committee. It caused the face of Dies' chief investigator, "Doc" Matthews, to take on the color of the charge.

In cross-examining Schuman, Matthews tried to make him admit "communistic" ties because he had made speeches several years ago before the Chicago Workers School and two other obscure left-wing groups. The FCC official admitted making the speeches, but said he had never been a member of the group.

"I can't say whether they belong to the Communist front or not," Schuman declared.

Dies prober Matthews snatched up a book, entitled "World Revolutionary Propaganda," by Harold D. Lasswell, former professor of political science at the University of Chicago. Lasswell is a noted authority on Soviet propaganda, helped the OWI set up its propaganda analysis division. Waving the book triumphantly at Schuman, Matthews asserted:

"Well, Harold Lasswell says these groups are communistic."

Schuman replied that he had the highest respect for Lasswell's integrity and ability. "If he said so, then it's true, agreed the FCC official.

When Matthews finished his examination, he magnanimously asked Schuman if there was anything he would like to add. Schuman fished a letter from his pocket, which he said had been written by a friend recommending him for his FCC job.

"Frederick Schuman is admirably qualified for this position," Schuman quoted from the letter. "There is no question about his reliability, loyalty, patriotism and devotion to the United States."

The letter was signed by Harold Lasswell.

Note: When the Kerr Committee, appointed to "investigate" the Dies Committee, ran across this testimony, they exonerated Schuman of being a Red.

4 Germans Watch U. S.

THERE are four Germans who know the United States better than any others. Where they are now reveals what importance Hitler attaches to the United States and its influence on the neutral countries. For all four Germans are located in key neutral capitals where they can watch Americans and keep their ears open for news of Untied States diplomatic and military maneuvers, and counteract American influence.

Here are the four German experts on the U. S. A.:

FRANZ VON PAPEN, German Military Attache in Washington during the last war when he engineered plans to blow up the Welland Canal and brain-trusted various other sabotage.

HANS HEINRICH DIECKHOFF, former Ambassador to Washington and one of the most skillful to be stationed here in years.

HANS THOMSEN, Counselor and Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy after Dieckhoff left Washington.

KURT SELL, correspondent of the official German News Agency D. N. B., long stationed in Washington where he was generally popular. Unofficially he acted frequently for the German Embassy.

In Europe these four are now stationed as follows: Von Papen in Turkey; Dieckhoff in Spain; Thomsen in Sweden, and Sell in Portugal.

These are countries which, if they moved their neutral position one way or the other, might decide the fate of the war.

Broken Dike Imperils 2000 in Indiana Flood

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, May 18.—The flood-swollen Wabash River broke a levee at West Terre Haute tonight, imperiling 2000 persons, as flood waters drove hundreds of families from their homes in widely scattered parts of Indiana and washed out crops, bridges and other property.

Two companies of the Indiana State Guard and approximately 200 soldiers from Fort Benjamin Harrison were pressed into service along the rising Wabash.

Red Cross disaster crews and Vigo County welfare workers were ordered to remove flood-stricken families to homes and emergency quarters in Terre Haute proper, and to high-land rural homes.

Worst in 30 Years

The floods in the central and north-central parts of the State were reported the worst in 30 years, and J. H. Armington, Government meteorologist, predicted the crests would be almost equal to those of the disastrous 1913 deluge.

Sections of Kokomo, Marion, Logansport, Noblesville, Wabash, Indianapolis and other cities were inundated by the Wabash and White Rivers and their tributaries. Thousands of acres of farm land were under water. Kokomo's schools were closed because some of the buildings were marooned; fears were felt for that city's water supply.

Power Dam in Danger

Engineers expressed concern whether the city power plant dam at Noblesville would hold.

The State highway commission reported more than 50 roads blocked. High water also impeded railroad traffic, some lines being washed out.

A break in the Illinois Pipe Line Co.'s 8-inch line east of Bluffton emptied hundreds of barrels of crude oil into the Wabash River, but the leak was repaired today.

Krupa Sentenced On Dope Charge

San Francisco, May 18 (AP).—Gene Krupa, interationally known band drummer, was sentenced to serve 90 days in the county jail and fined $500 following his plea of guilty today to a misdemeanor charge in a narcotics accusation.

Superior Judge Thomas M. Foley said a felnoy charge against Krupa, for allegedly inducing a minor to transport narcotic marijuana cigarettes, would be brought to trial June 8. The prosecution charged John Pateakos, 20, valet to Krupa, was arrested in possession of marijuana cigarettes after Krupa allegedly sent him to his hotel room for them.

Industry is helping win the war . . .

industry must help build a peacetime world

Today, all industries must produce as never before—must speed the output of food, tanks, planes, guns, ships and other instruments of war—must conserve vital supplies—that we may win quickly a decisive victory.

Tomorrow, all industries must continue to produce—beating swords into plowshares—to prevent world-wide unemployment leading to ultimate economic collapse.

If the world is to prosper, there must be the same cohesion among the United Nations during the transition period and thereafter as now exists during the world-wide conflict. Internal stability here and in other nations can be gained and maintained only by sustained industrial production and by interdependence.

The people of this country, in common with the people of other lands, will prosper materially and spiritually when this war is ended but only if plans world-wide in scope are formulated promptly for A JUST AND DURABLE PEACE.

U. S. Bombers Take 5-1 Toll Of Nazi Planes

By Howard Berry
International News Service Staff Writer

London, May 18.—Britain-based American heavy bombers were disclosed tonight to have shot down 121 German fighters in three days of a titanic Allied air offensive that has rained 13,500 tons of bombs on Europe and its coastal fringes in the last week.

The American bag of Nazi interceptors was taken last Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Twenty American heavy bombers, presumably Flying Fortresses, were lost in the smashing three-day victory, representing a margin of superiority exceeding five to one in favor of the American bombers.

A communique from American headquarters in Britain said the four-engined bombers scored the combat successes during heavy daylight attacks on the enemy centers of Meaulte, St. Omer, Kiel, Emden, Velsen and Antwerp.

Figures Conservative

The figures released tonight did not include numerous Nazi interceptors downed yesterday by great formations of Fortresses and Liberators that rocked docks and U-boat facilities at Lorient and Bordeaux with hundreds of tons of bombs.

American headquarters announced that aerial photographs of the two Nazi-held French ports, taken today, revealed that the United States bombers had dealt "concentrated and destructive blows against U-boats," with submarine pens at Bordeaux flooded by the blasting of harbor locks.

The unprecedented magnitude of the 'round-the-clock Allied air campaign was reflected tonight in conservative estimates by authoritative London sources which said some 15,800-plane sorties had been hurled against Hitler's European "fortress" from midnight, May 11, up to the afternoon of May 18.

In that brief period, it was disclosed, a little more than 5000 bomber sorties were flung against land objectives in western, central and southern Europe from bases in Britain and North Africa. Nearly 12,000 tons of explosives were discharged in these raids, establishing a new world's record for a single week of bombing.

800 Sorties Against Ships

In addition, Allied planes in the same period staged an estimated 800 sorties against enemy ships in the Mediterranean and off northwestern Europe, dropping 1500 tons of bombs. Fighter sorties against enemy trains and other communications as well as in escort flights and offensive sweeps were declared to have exceeded 10,000.

These careful estimates did not include repeated, large-scale Soviet raids on German and Nazi-occupied rail and industrial strongholds from the east. No exact figures of Russian planes and bomb loads involved in these attacks were available in London. But, judging from the plane losses announced from Moscow, it was estimated that the Soviet air force had engaged in about 1400 bombing sorties, dropping some 2500 tons of bombs, during the last week.

Thus, the grand total of sorties by the United Nations against Hitler's European citadel was estimated to have reached or surpassed 17,200, with no less than 15,000 tons of explosives dumped on enemy objectives.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Sardinia Port and Airfield At Alghero Bombed, Strafed

By William B. King
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 18.—From their North African springboard Allied planes dealt a heavy blow last night to the port and airfield of Alghero in Sardinia, and elsewhere asserted their mastery of Mediterranean skies with harassing raids.

R. A. F. Wellingtons plumped bombs upon the town and port areas of Alghero, on the western coast of Sardinia, and then pounded their targets with machine gun bullets in strafing attacks as low as 200 feet.

At least one big fire was started in the center of the town, pilots reported. Bright moonlight aided this latest of many smashes at Axis power in the island guarding the Italian mainland.

The British navy, meanwhile, reported rounding up 23 Germans who had succeeded in fleeing Cap Bon and reaching Zembretta Island, near the tip of the cape. But there they ran out of food and painted an S O S on the lighthouse.

When Britons arrived by motorboat, the Germans complained that "we've waived at Spitfires and naval boats for the last four days trying to attract attention."

The Allied communique reported minor successes in routine patrols by Allied pilots. One Beaufighter met and destroyed two Junkers-52 transports off the Sardinian coast Monday, and another Beaufighter downed a Heinkel-111 and a Junkers-88 Sunday night.

A British communique told of attacks from Malta on shipping, railways, and roads last night in southern Italy, and strafing of a tank-landing boat filled with troops at Augusta on eastern Sicily. Porto Empedocle in southern Sicily was pounded Monday night by naval squadrons that set fire to a power station and bombed a railway and nearby buildings.

A Middle East communique reported fighter attacks on another schooner in the Aegean. The crew abandoned the vessel.

All the operations were carried out without loss of an Allied plane.

New Nazi Defenses

London, May 18 (AP).—In the unusually clear weather, hastily constructed German defense works can now seen plainly in the Calais and the Cape Gris Nez sector of the French coast by observers on England's southeast chalk cliffs.

The defenses were described by the observers as sporting much new construction since the last perfect day of visibility several months ago. Slopes running down to the sea between Calais and Cape Blanc showed trenches and pillboxes, and between Cape Griz Nez and Wissant to the east new antitank-type trenches were seen.

facts about
Apple "Honey"

1 What it is...

Apple "Honey" is a new moistening agent which replaces glycerine now needed for vital war duty. Like glycerine, it helps to keep cigarettes moist and fresh on their way to you.

2 Who developed it...

This new moistening agent was created by the United States Department of Agriculture, by processing the juice of fresh, ripe apples. The result is a smooth, mellow syrup.

3 What it's like...

This rich, bland syrup has no distinctive flavor of its own. It is about the consistency of honey—and, like honey, it has a clear, golden color. So we named it Apple "Honey." We think it is superior to glycerine, in several respects.

4 How we use it...

We now spray our choice Old Gold tobaccos with Apple "Honey." Every fiber is bathed in this pure, mellow "honey" . . . to help it stay moist, fresh, and flavorful. An inconspicuous item in a long news dispatch from London telling of the round-the-clock offensive being carried out by the R. A. F. and the American Air Force throws a revealing light on one aspect of the war of attrition being waged against the Reich. "In raids Saturday night," says this item, "railway lines were the principal targets in western Germany, France, Holland and Belgium."

The importance of this kind of bombing lies in the fact that Germany's transportation system is now one of her major bottlenecks. Every locomotive that is destroyed or damaged, every repair shop that is demolished, every bridge or tunnel that is destroyed means a jamming of the flow of raw materials to factories and weapons to the fighting front. No wonder, then, that the German authorities have found it necessary to cut out civilian traffic altogether, and to compel the diversion of all but the most important shipments from rail to water lines. But the R. A. F. has countered the latter move by heavy bombing raids on such important canal junction points as Duisberg and more recently by an attack on dams.

On Sunday two of these dams were demolished by bombing and a great flood of water was released down the valleys of the Ruhr and Eder. This was, from the point of view of the R. A. F., an expensive operation. For, as Sir Archibald Sinclair, minister for air, disclosed, "eight big Lancasters with precious crews were lost." But the damage to German industry is likely to prove very great. Moreover, in view of the latter-day importance of canal traffic, the destruction of the dams must have resulted in a considerable tying up of transportation. It is evident that the war of attrition against the Reich is reaching a new high point of intensity and effectiveness.

Case For The Courts

Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, with his customary courage, has stated bluntly that he has "every confidence" in Dr. Robert Morse Lovett and that he will "retain him so long as I have legal power to do so." Similarly, the members of the Federal Communications Commission have risen to the defense of two of their employes who, like Dr. Lovett, were branded by the Kerr Committee as "unfit at the present time to continue in Government service."

The House has now passed the Kerr Committee recommendation that Congress forbid the use of any appropriation to pay salaries to these men whose political views happen to have incurred the disapproval of Congressmen Dies and Kerr. These men have not violated any law. They have not advocated the overthrow of the United States Government. They have merely engaged in activities which are "subversive" within the curious and mystical definition of that term devised by the Kerr Committee. As we have pointed out heretofore, we consider the proposed action of Congress to be a clear invasion of the sphere of executive authority.

Apparently the Secretary of the Interior and the members of the FCC think so too. They are responsible for determining the qualifications of their employes. They possess discretionary power within statutory limits to hire men and to dismiss them. If they lacked such power, they would scarcely be able to administer their agencies. Indeed, if Congress were successfully to usurp this power, the executive branch of the Government would become subordinate to the legislative, instead of enjoying the equal status provided for it in the Constitution.

The constitutionality of any such congressional action should be tested before the third branch of the United States Government, the judiciary. Accordingly, we trust that the executive agencies will resolutely continue to keep the proscribed individuals in their employ. Then, if the disbursing officer of the Treasury refuses to issue pay checks to them when due, these men themselves could appropriately bring suit against the Government in the Court of Claims for recovery of their salaries.

This might augment congressional wrath and cause the Kerr Committee to denounce them as supersubversive, but it would also render a public service. We believe that they would have the support of an enlightened public opinion. Many distinguished members of the legal profession would no doubt be eager to champion a cause involving such basic American principles. Indeed, the case is sufficiently important as it stands to warrant such zealous champions of the constitutional rights of the individual as Wendell L. Willkie and Charles B. Warren in raising their voices against the smearing tactics of the Kerr Committee.

Look To The East

The reminder of the American preoccupation with the war in the Pacific which came out of the Senate on Monday was extremely salutary. Only China and the Netherlands among our Allies share to the full our American concern. Russia, indeed, is still neutral toward Japan. Her anxiety to avoid a war on two fronts was never questioned when the Russians were fighting with their backs against the Archangel-Astrakhan line. It would have jeopardized both their defense and our Allied interests if they had risked war with Japan in the rear. There has been the same acceptance of the high strategical concept of the paramountcy of the Mediterranean which has dominated and probably continues to dominate Mr. Churchill's thinking. But the events of the last few weeks have changed the situation radically. There is more justification now for urging upon our Allies other than China and the Netherlands the need for a fresh global view of our global struggle.

Those events have lessened the Russian anxiety about Germany. The pressure in the West has been taken off our Russian friends not only by their successes but also by a combination of our African victories, the air bombing of Germany, the prospective establishment of a second front in Europe, and the stepping up of our aid to Russia in material shipments. Fear of Japan seems to be totally absent in Moscow. Time was when the Russians were apprehensive lest the use of the short air route from Alaska to Russia for lend-lease supplies might provide a casus belli to Japan. But it is doubtful whether Japan at this stage of the war could ever be goaded into an invasion of Siberia. That, at any rate, seems to be the Russian conclusion. Otherwise the Russians would not have started to take over our lend-lease supplies in Alaska and fly them across Siberia. In these circumstances our diplomacy should now be urging upon our Russian ally the lend-leasing of bases in Kamchatka whence to begin the destruction of Japan.

Senator Chandler, in the Senate debate, fell into a common confusion when he implied that the battle of the Mediterranean was conducted against Hitler alone. The fact is that our Tunisian triumph was the logical first step to victory against both our enemies. The worry obvious in Tokyo is the testimony to the fact. The Mediterranean, which divides Europe, Africa and Asia, occupies the very center of the grand strategy against the Axis. And the opening success in the battle of the Mediterranean at El Alamein will rank as one of history's greatest battles because it blocked the union of our enemies and thereby shortened the war by many years. With the whole of the Middle Sea now virtually in our hands, our high strategists are now in a position to mount an offensive against both Germany and Japan simultaneously.

This is what the people of this country wish to see. They are wondering whether, with Japan so far away from the homeland, the British share that desire. Mr. Churchill, of course, thinks of the Mediterranean as the passage to India. Is he yet looking beyond India? Certainly, as the Senate debate testified, this country is now looking beyond India. We see India as the springboard to Burma, Burma as the springboard to China, and China as the springboard to Japan. In the calculations of most Americans this is the main route leading to the destruction of Japan. And, if we mean to keep China in the war, if we mean to prevent the consolidation of the Japanese occupation of Indonesia, the conferences in Washington should yield the assurance that the Allies intend to tackle the Japanese via the Burma route at the end of the monsoon season.

Unfortunately the American people will not get an impression of seriousness of purpose from the collapse of the latest Burma campaign. This move has been so ineffectual as to promote a wonder whether the British heart as well as the British head was in the Burma campaign. "Too little" was again sent against the Japanese. If the British contend that they must spread out their deficiencies, they invite the comment which Senator Chandler offered in the Senate. As he said, there are almost two million British troops in India. Of these a quarter of a million are on the northwest frontier, though no disturbances are reported from that region. It thus appears to have been either a repetition of the old blunder of underestimating the enemy or an unwillingness to view Burma as an urgent task which persuaded Field Marshal Sir Archibald Wavell to send only a division plus half a division of reinforcements into the attack on Burma. The rumbling in the Senate cannot be dismissed as an idle commentary on the war.

Buying Binge

It is hard to imagine anything better calculated to precipitate a buying frenzy than the statement by Mr. Donald M. Nelson to a House committee that clothes rationing "is imminent unless we can use the best brains of the industry and so utilize all the facilities as to get the most out of them." Publication of Mr. Nelson's testimony has had the expected, one is tempted to say inevitable, result: it has touched off another great consumers' buying rush at a time when a larger and larger part of the textile supply is being drained off by military, lend-lease and relief demands.

Mr. Nelson's testimony is all the more remarkable in view of his experience last February with the psychology of buyers in times of scarcity. The announcement of shoe rationing quite naturally gave rise to rumors that clothing would be next. Here in Washington, and elsewhere in the country, there was a stampede to the retail clothing shops. This wave of frantic buying subsided only after Mr. Nelson himself had made a public statement assuring us (a) that there was no shortage of either clothing or textiles and (b) that such a thing as clothes rationing was not even contemplated.

As we pointed out then, had this statement been made before or concurrently with the announcement of the shoe rationing edict, it might have averted or at least restrained the subsequent buying wave. The singular thing is Mr. Nelson's complete failure to profit by this lesson. Indeed, if it now becomes necessary to add clothing to the rationing list, Mr. Nelson will have had his own not inconsiderable share in having made it necessary.

This is altogether aside from the almost direct contradiction between Mr. Nelson's statement to the House committee and his statement to the public last February. Recently it was the fashion among responsible officials to contradict one another on these questions of real and illusory shortages. Now it is becoming the fashion for them to contradict themselves. One does not have to be a profound psychologist to realize that such contradictions are not the best way to promote confidence and self-restraint among consumers.

Hew To The Line

The coal crisis appears to be back where it was a fortnight ago. Secretary Ickes continues to operate the mines on behalf of the United States Government. John Lewis has once more graciously consented to permit the members of his union to work in the mines—for a two-week period of grace. And the War Labor Board remains seated unhappily on the sidelines, like a wallflower wondering when Mr. Lewis will ask it to dance.

In his telegram to John Lewis seeking assurance that coal mining would be uninterrupted, Mr. Ickes expressed the hope that "the way will be open for immediate collective bargaining conferences." Mr. Lewis' hope, expressed in reply, was that Mr. Ickes would "instruct the coal operators of the industry to forthwith engage in collective bargaining conferences." Neither of these hopes is shared by this newspaper.

On the contrary, it seems to us that the time for collective bargaining expired when the War Labor Board assumed jurisdiction over the dispute. This board has explicitly instructed the operators not to proceed with collective bargaining until both parties are ready to accept its auspices. There is no good reason to suppose that collective bargaining would be any more fruitful now than it was before. John Lewis' tractability does not appear to have increased. And the operators are apparently determined to concede nothing unless compelled to do so.

The War Labor Board was established to meet precisely this sort of situation. It is high time for it to start functioning. It has at its disposal all the essential facts of the case. If John Lewis wants to recognize its authority and come before it to argue for his side, well and good. If he does not, the board is perfectly capable of reaching an equitable decision without him. That decision should be reached as promptly as possible, and the coal dispute should be settled in accordance with it.

The maintenance of the WLB's authority, as we have pointed out before, is the prime issue in this case. We are glad that Mr. Ickes, in his subsequent letter to Lewis, took care to reaffirm that authority. If the board should be by-passed in this particular situation, it might as well be buried. And buried along with it will be labor's no-strike pledge. For other labor leaders will not be content to petition peaceably for redress of their grievances if they see Lewis' strong-arm tactics win results. The War Labor Board must proceed to act decisively on this case, at once, and its decision must be unequivocally upheld with the full power of the Federal Government.

COWS LET OUT IN EARLY SPRING

You never know . . . where cows will go!
They seem to feel
That freedom's won
All in a single dash;

They rock and reel,
And canter and run
Over the hummocks and down the hill,
Tails out stiff and legs flung far
In a blithe, bewildered sort of war
To get away at any cost,
Even if they're forever lost!

They charge at the fence,
They crash
Into the bushes . . . they rub and scrape
Their silly horns along the shingles
Of a shed; the belled-cow jingles,
And clanks and tankles
In wild disorder . . . captivity rankles—
They will escape!

And then the absurd, immense
Disorders fade;
They grow afraid
Of freedom . . . and come back,
Their brown eyes mild, their stiff tails slack.

Trade Agreements

By Mark Sullivan

Hull or Wallace

IF THE Senate acts favorably on the request of Secretary of State Hull for extension of his system of international trade pacts, it will be for one reason. The reason will be Mr. Hull. If the Senate's action is favorable (which is not certain) it will be by a narrow majority. And much more than the number who compose the majority will be Senators who support the pacts wholly because of their confidence in Mr. Hull.

Indeed the situation can be stated much more strongly. It is only because of Mr. Hull that the trade pacts have any chance at all. If this were a request made by the New Deal Administration for an international purpose of its own, if for example it were a request from Vice President Wallace for something he has in mind, it would not have the faintest chance of passage. Indeed, the fact is that many Senators will support the Hull policy merely out of apprehension that if they don't take Hull, they may get Wallace.

The controversy over the reciprocal trade pacts is commonly discussed as if it were a controversy between the reciprocal pact system, and the old system of periodic general tariff revisions by Congress. To some extent, that controversy exists. But if that were all of it, then the trade pacts policy would probably win, as it has already won three times—when first adopted in 1934, when extended for three years in 1937, and again extended in 1940. But the new three-year extension now asked for is looked upon in the light of a wholly new condition. The new condition consists of the strange new notions about international trade and an international world put forward by Vice President Wallace and other radical New Dealers.

MR. WALLACE and Mr. Hull both have plans about international trade. At least Mr. Hull has a plan, which has been in operation for nine years. What Mr. Wallace has, had better be described as a dream, a global dream, an astrological vision.

Whatever the objections to Mr. Hull's plan, it has one immense saving grace. It is within the framework of American individualism and private ownership of business. It contemplates that a private citizen or corporation shall be able to carry on trade with any citizen of any foreign country, without interference by Government except the ordinary imposition of tariffs. Mr. Hull is an individualist, a strong one; he has no part in the collectivist tendencies of the New Deal.

What Mr. Wallace's dream is cannot be said, for it would be an adventure into the unknown. But one apprehends that in practice it would take the form of collectivism—that if attempt were made to put Mr. Wallace's ideas into practice, international trade would become a monopoly of government as in Russia. Possibly Mr. Wallace might deny that this is his intention. But Mr. Wallace is the sort of person who dreams that you can put a goose egg into an incubator and hatch something that does not have the characteristics of a goose.

To envisage Mr. Wallace's dream, turn to that international farm and food conference now getting under way at Hot Springs, Va. Just what it is cooking, the public does not know, and care is taken to prevent newsmen from letting the public find out. As likely as not, some of the delegates themselves do not realize what is contemplated. But persons who probe beneath the surface suspect strongly that the intention is to set up an international control over farms and over food distribution—an expansion to international proportions of what Mr. Wallace set up in America as Triple-A, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. That this would mean government management of international trade in farm products goes without saying.

SOME IN Congress support Mr. Hull's policy about international trade because they fear that otherwise they may get Mr. Wallace's. At the same time, others oppose Mr. Hull's policy precisely because they fear that in operation this policy, without Mr. Hull's wish, may be turned into a Wallace policy.

Again, the Hull system of reciprocal trade pacts, as it now stands, and as Mr. Hull asks that it be extended for three years, includes waiver by Congress of two of its fundamental functions—the tariff making function and the Senate function of ratifying international agreements. Extension of this waiver is asked at a time when the Administration shows a clear wish, along a broad front, to take into its own hands functions which belong to the legislative branch of government.

Because of such steps by the Administration, too many to enumerate here, Congress has become sensitive about its legislative function. This accounts for the disposition of many in Congress to extend Mr. Hull's system of trade pacts—but retain in Congress the power to veto individual pacts if Congress so chooses.

Night Attack

By Paul Schubert

Three Dimensional War

On the last British bombing raid against Duisberg, one of the war's heaviest, 34 of the attacking bombers were reported lost. The raid was a night attack. Hence the 34 planes lost were destroyed by some form of enemy gunfire effective during darkness—barring those which may have crashed due to mechanical failure or human shortcoming. The enemy gunfire may have come from the ground; it may have come from interceptor aircraft. Whatever its source, it found its target under conditions beyond the powers of the human eye. The number of planes lost indicates that the accuracy of this gunfire is due to something more than luck. A general barrage put over a target area in the form of an "umbrella" might account for one or two planes out of several hundred attackers. But air warfare is three dimensional. Apart from the great speed of the attack, the choice of heights and directions at which planes can come in is so varied, that well aimed shots are the only ones that can get a consistent percentage of hits. To aim at aircraft targets, at night, it's clear that the gunners must depend on some agency other than the human eye. The answer: Radar, or its equivalent.

In spite of this equipment which penetrates the darkness, German antiaircraft and interceptor gunnery is not good enough to make such attacks "unprofitable"—that is, to shoot down such a high percentage of the planes engaged, that the British cannot afford the losses.

THE equipment in use by our side may be somewhat more efficient. We know that at the time of the "Battle of Britain," back in 1940 and 1941, British antiaircraft and aerial gunnery was good enough to defeat the Germans, first in daylight and then in night air warfare—and we know the reason the Germans were stopped then, at night, was because of Britain's "radio locator" system.

As for our own equipment, we were given some interesting information a few days ago when Brigadier General Richardson spoke to news correspondents at Fort Bliss. Our Army is now using antiaircraft guns up to 5-inch in caliber, semimobile, aimed by Radar which makes gunfire almost as effective against unseen targets at night as against visual targets by day. In Africa, according to the general, our antiaircraft fire brought down 10 enemy planes "known destroyed" during a three-month period, with 50 to 60 more "probables." The Navy has used 5-inch antiaircraft guns for the last 15 years or so, with increasingly accurate means of directing and controlling the fire.

Air attack is not the only form of three-dimensional action encountered at night in modern war.

Submarine attack is also a night problem. The U-boats do attack by day, as well, and they attack singly as well as in wolf-packs. But the great submarine "headache" of the present war has been the pack attack boldly carried out at night, with the submarines running on the surface, charging in among the ships of a convoy to deliver their torpedoes, then pulling out either on the surface or in evasive dives . . . only to re-form and come in again for another attack. . . .

The success of this attack was due (1) to the fact that for a long time our convoys were inadequately escorted—the "packs" overpowered us by using a greater number of attacking submarines, than the escorts of the usual convoy could begin to deal with. And (2) the success was due to the effectiveness of darkness as a cover for the attackers. Low in the water, with only the slender conning tower to loom against the night horizon, the submarine was virtually invisible—and when it was sighted, it was a poor target for gunfire, even though lit up by searchlights.

RECENTLY, however, we've heard of a long running fight between an Atlantic convoy and a pack of German submarines—a fight that lasted more than a week, with the enemy using as many as 25 submarines which came in in repeated assaults.

In the course of this fight, four U-boats were known sunk, another four "very probably" sunk, and two more "probably" sunk—perhaps as good a percentage of sinkings as has been attained during the war. As to the convoy, "it suffered some damage, but the majority of the merchantmen reached port in safety." In other words, the action was a victory for the British convoy escorts (which included both ships and aircraft).

One great problem of anti-submarine warfare, was the job of building up the huge fleet of escort ships necessary to meet and beat the U-boats. No less a problem was the creation of the Radar and Asdic instruments, and the training of men to operate them. We knew how to stop the submarine long before we were actually able to do so.

Argentine Drought

The world has principally five large agricultural producing areas: The United States, Argentina, central Europe (Germany), Russia and India.

Argentina, the world's second largest exporter, is in the Southern Hemisphere and has just had its crop producing season and cannot be counted upon as they experienced a severe drought, in which no rain fell from November 19, 1942, to the middle of March, 1943, and, according to the news item, crops were ruined to the extent of 75 per cent. The wheat yield is 235 million bushels against an average of 238 million, while the corn crop was almost totally ruined, being 74 million bushels against 355 million for 1942 and 403 million for 1941, and this severe damage to the corn crop will further reflect itself upon the livestock!

The United States in recent years has been blessed with good crop growing weather, and as drought periods seem to travel in cycles, it being just nine years since the previous one, which is still remembered by most everyone, the urgent need for a banner crop this year becomes all the more urgent in this emergency.

Crop reports from the Department of Agriculture just made public reveal that winter wheat is 27 per cent under the previous year and lowest since the drought year of 1935, with rice 20 million bushels short of last year, representing a decrease of 60 per cent, and early spring crops off to a poor start.

Food, indeed, is the staff of life, and the world food conference is surely needed.

Rides For Soldiers

In this morning's Post, I noticed a letter from "American Service Man," in which he severely criticized the motoring public.

My experience is the direct antipode of his so I feel that I must take up the verbal cudgels in defense of my fellow drivers. I have never failed to stop at corners where I saw stray servicemen without calling out in my best upstate-New-York-morning voice "Twenty-third and C Streets or way points!"

And what do I get in reply? "Waitin' for a fellah." "Guess I'll walk," etc., ad nauseam. About once out of every 20 times, some intrepid sailor will pile in—but not very often.

There are innumerable people like me willing and eager to share that last full drop of gasoline, but who have been turned down with startling regularity. F. G. B.

Fairness To Lithuania

Under the title of "Straws in the Wind," Mr. Walter Lippmann comments regarding the Baltic states and attempts to convince us that these people were "Fascistic" and "focal points of anti-Russian intrigues." Further he adds that Stalin's policy "is not the desire to obtain territory or introduce communism in western Europe."

In 1940, with no provocation and by use of armed forces, the Soviets occupied Lithuania and other Baltic states and proceeded to hold a farcical election at an end of communistic bayonets. The Baltic states found themselves at cross fires of two similar, dangerous ideologies, the German naziism and the Russian communism. When "boring from within" became too apparent and a real threat to Lithuania's freedom and independence, its people were compelled to change its government and institute a more regimented type (1926).

The new government at no time issued laws or edicts prohibiting opposition parties from functioning or taking part in political activities, provided they were free from sedition. Freedom of speech, press and religion was never denied anyone. In 1927 to 1940 representatives of Christian Democrats, Nationalists and Populists, comprising all the leading parties and representing about 95 per cent, composed the Lithuanian government. This was a coalition government. In 1938 a new constitution was adopted and ratified by the House of Representatives. The Jewish representatives who came to Lithuania to investigate their people's condition often remarked that Lithuania was the only country on the European continent that treated the Jews humanely. Of course when the Nazis and Communists started their underground activities and were apprehended smuggling seditious literature and even arms the Lithuanian government took action. Hitler blasted at Lithuania and its President Smetona in open speeches, threatened and then instituted retaliatory measures by closing his borders to all the Lithuanian trade.

As regards Lithuania being a focal point of "anti-Russian intrigues," on the contrary Lithuania enjoyed very friendly relations with Soviet Russia, but it also understood communism and opposed it with all its power, same as we are opposing it here in America. From 1918 to 1940 (invasion of Lithuania) Moscow never lodged a single complaint against Lithuania.

The Baltic States, and especially Lithuania, by their excellent conduct during 22 years of regained freedom demonstrate that they are entitled to independence. The hope of Lithuania and all the small Nations is American victory, and our continued security rests upon the Atlantic Charter.

Juvenile Delinquency

The already well trained unit of volunteers for defense, our splendid A. P. officers, are groaning under their inactivity.

In every busy wartime American city juvenile delinquency raises an ugly head. Let the Office of Civilian Defense swing into action, and recommend the establishment of an "Auxiliary Police Delinquency Patrol" city-wide, one unit in each police precinct to work with regular force under the leadership of A. P. officer leadership appointed for that type of work. A curb in growing juvenile delinquency will result and a now inactive A. P. unit will find an outlet for a much needed service on the home front.

Democracy At Home

We were delighted with your wise and fine editorial on the race trouble of last week and the danger of rumors. I am on the board of Friendship House, the settlement for whites in Southeast Washington, and we want so much to see better understanding and kindness between the races. It is very heartening to have you speak so highly of the conduct of the colored people throughout the whole affair last week. I hope you will keep people alive to the knowledge of what democracy and freedom must mean here on the home front.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Blitz Then And Now

The blitzkrieg was a wondrous feat,
A tactic which makes progress fleet;
The Nazis made it quite a fad . . .
But how they wish they never had!

The blitzkrieg set a dizzy pace
For any so-called Master Race;
Herr Hitler thought it up when hot . . .
But how he wishes he had not!

The blitzkrieg was such goulish fun
When it was dished out by the Hun;
He gave it everything he could . . .
But now it does not look so good!

The blitzkrieg was a thing devised
To keep a whole world terrorized;
It was the gem of Hitler Haus,
But now the word for it is "Raus!"

The blitzkrieg, what a master thought!
Some lessons to those Poles it taught;
(It taught those Netherlanders, too—)
But that was when the thing was new!

The blitz was one swell Nazi scheme;
They loved to hear the victims scream;
But when it's done by Nazi foes,
Ach, Gott, such low and dirty blows!

The blitzkrieg, how it battered France!
The slaughter made Der Fuehrer dance;
But, turned about, it's something else . . .
Der Fuehrer's fervor for it melts!

The blitz applied to helpless Greeks—
It made plump Goering laugh for weeks!
It made his tummy shake and how! . . .
But that is not what's shaking now!

A blitz put on an English town—
The Nazis do that stuff up brown;
That's war at new artistic heights
They thought . . . but not these days and nights!

A farmer blasted at his crops——
This struck the Nazi code as tops;
A kindergarten stained with gore
Seemed legal . . . but not any more!

Civilians, helpless, cut to bits——
This gave the Nazis laughing fits;
They think their blitz was quite a stunt—
But only when they're out in front!

From Warsaw through to Coventry
The Nazis staged the blitz with glee;
It fattened Adolf's pride and purse . . .
But, ach, how different in reverse!

So many Nazis have been taken that Ima Dodo thinks the ceiling must be off them.

"150,000 Prisoners in Bag."—Headline.

And without even exhausting all our points!

Listen, Von Arnim! How about sending a card to Adolf: "Having a wonderful time; wish you were here!"

Hitler now announces that Marshal Rommel has long been sick in Germany. The one great fear there must be that this particular illness is catching.

Or, judging from complete accounts of his flight back from the very shadow of Alexandria, it would seem wholly possible that Rommel's illness is a plain case of air sickness. He had his feet off the ground most of the time.

Footnotes On Mr. Churchill

LINDLEY

In reviewing American-British strategy during the last 18 months and trying to divine what may come next, it may be profitable to refresh one's recollection of Mr. Winston Churchill's strategical concepts during the first World War. Mr. Churchill served in the British government during that war as First Lord of the Admiralty and Minister of Munitions. He had decided views about Allied strategy, but was able to make them prevail only temporarily and imperfectly.

No one has taken to task more severely the generals who insisted on trying to win the war by frontal attacks on the Western Front. The remorseless war of attrition in the West cost the British 2,700,000 casualties, the French about five million (including more than 1,800,000 dead), and the Germans about 4,700,000 (including about 1,500,000 dead).

OPPOSED to the terribly costly assaults in the west, Mr. Churchill favored a war of flank attacks and maneuvers. The French and British commanders in the west—and the Germans also to a lesser extent—suffered from "localitis." Because the trenches ran from the North Sea to Switzerland, they could not see how to make flank attacks. But this front, beyond which many of them could not see, was only one sector in a much larger theater. Mr. Churchill saw that it was possible to flank this front and get in behind it by great amphibious operations in the Baltic and at the Dardanelles. After the war, in his book, "The World Crisis," (Charles Scribner's Sons), he wrote:

"The essence of the war problem was not changed by its enormous scale. The line of the Central Powers from the North Sea to the Aegean and stretching loosely beyond even to the Suez Canal was, after all, in principle not different from the line of a small army entrenched across an isthmus, with each flank resting upon water. As long as France was treated as a self-contained theater, a complete deadlock existed, and the front of the German invaders could neither be pierced nor turned. But once the view was extended to the whole scene of the war, and that vast war conceived as if it were a single battle, and once the sea power of Britain was brought into play, turning movements of the most far-reaching character were open to the Allies."

In the same book, Mr. Churchill set forth certain practical propositions which guided his thinking about the strategy of World War I. As to land operations these were:

"1. The decisive theater is the theater where a vital decision may be obtained at any given time. The main theater is that in which the main armies or fleets are stationed. This is not at all times the decisive theater.

"2. If the fronts or centers of armies cannot be broken, their flanks should be turned. If these flanks rest on the seas, the manuevers to turn them must be amphibious and dependent on sea power.

"3. The least-guarded strategic points should be selected for attack, not those most strongly guarded.

"4. In any hostile combination, once it is certain that the strongest power cannot be directly defeated itself, but cannot stand without the weakest, it is the weakest that should be attacked.

"5. No offensive on land should be launched until an effective means—numbers, surprise, munitions or mechanical devices—of carrying it through has been discovered."

This is the line of reasoning which led Mr. Churchill to advocate the attack on the Dardanelles. In retrospect, it is hard to doubt that if that campaign had been well-organized—a failing for which Mr. Churchill was not responsible—it would have succeeded, and that if it had succeeded it probably would have prevented the collapse of Russia, and shortened the war.

THIS WAR, in its recent and present stages, differs in many respects from the first World War. There is no land front in the west, although the heavily fortified Channel and North Sea coasts of Europe may perhaps be compared with it. The plane, the tank and various other weapons have given the offense greater advantage over the defense than it had during the first World War, although the margin of advantage may now be smaller than it appeared to be during the German offensives of two and three years ago.

But the kind of strategical thinking which was characteristic of Mr. Churchill during the first World War has been reflected by recent action in this one. President Roosevelt has not written a comparable report and critique on the first World War. But there is a great deal of evidence that his general approach to war strategy is similar to Mr. Churchill's. Both know the mobility and surprise that are inherent in sea power. Both are resourceful, imaginative and supple, but given to weighing carefully the chances of success.

At best, victory will cost dearly in casualties. But it is comforting to feel that millions of lives may be spared because in this war the strategy of the Western Allies is directed by men who, like all first-rate military leaders, think in terms of maneuver rather than frontal assault and slaughter.

Retailers Ask Relief

Flay OPA Controls

By the Associated Press

Controls established by the Office of Price Administration were assailed on three fronts yesterday by spokesmen reporting they represented more than 10 million of the Nation's shopkeepers and landlords.

In Chicago, the National Association of Retail Grocers dispatched an appeal to President Roosevelt for relief from new OPA price ceilings, declaring the Nation's retail grocers are "shocked and stunned" by new maximum prices on canned foods.

The association, which said it spoke for 360,000 storekeepers, asserted that the prices in some areas were below the replacement cost and may force retailers to accept a loss.

A double-pronged attack on OPA regulations was made before House committees here by representatives of small businessmen and by real estate men, including Herbert U. Nelson of Chicago, executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, who said he spoke for an estimated ten million landlords.

Sees Socialist Scheme

Rowland Jones, jr., of the National Association of Retail Druggists, who said he represented 28,000 independent druggists, charged before the House Small Business Committee that "the real purpose of OPA is the establishment of a socialist system. Present policies of the agency," he declared, "lead in that direction."

Rivers Peterson, managing director of the National Retail Hardware Association, told the committee that independent hardware dealers were being forced out of business by OPA regulations "attempting to control every element of a trade carried on by a retailer."

Opening a special House Committee's investigation of OPA rent fixing policies, Nelson charged that OPA had failed to administer rent control fairly and "thus created conflict and confusion."

Nelson said that his group did not favor "rent gouging," but the OPA had "wholly ignored" the board's recommendations for what he described as an efficient and fair rent program.

First Blamed Ignorance

L. J. Efferth, secretary and manager of the Apartment House Owners Association of Cleveland, also charged OPA rent control officials with "subversive intentions."

"A personal opinion which develops from my contact with certain officials of the rent section of OPA," Efferth told the committee, "bluntly is that the men originally charged with responsibility of administering this act have sabotaged it, either as a result of their total ignorance of the business they are charged with administering, or deliberate with subversive intent."

"Eleven months ago," he continued, "I would have preferred to accuse them of ignorance, but today I am inclined to accuse them of subversive intentions."

Wartime Washington

Congress And The Bureaucrats

PUSEY

THE FIGHT that is steadily growing between Congress and the "bureaucrats" is a matter of grave public concern. Even casual visitors to Capitol Hill note the bristling attitude of members of Congress toward most of the administrative agencies, whether they are directing part of the war effort or peacetime activities. In turn the hostility of administrative officials toward Congress is often so intense as to shock anyone whose hope for the future is wholly grounded in democracy.

If we look at this dangerous feud from the viewpoint of either Congress or the administrative agencies, there is much justification on each side. Many Congressmen believe that the administrative agencies are swiftly taking the power to govern out of the hands of the Legislature. They insist that administrative agencies often exceed their powers, that their bright young lawyers are haughty and rude in dealing with Congressmen, that the agencies are overstaffed and inefficient, and that they frequently flout the policies enacted by Congress to give effect to their own theories.

Congressmen have long been in the habit of smoothing the way of their constituents before administrative agencies. When they are told by some bright young maker of executive rules and regulations, "Yes, this rule probably does inflict a hardship upon your constituent, but that's the way we have decided to do it and the rule must stand," they are naturally infuriated. The Congressman swears that he will rip the salary of that impertinent so-and-so out of the next appropriations bill and proceeds to look for ways and means of doing so.

ON THE other hand, the higher-ups in the commissions, boards and bureaus are likely to feel that they have a job of the greatest importance to do, that they shouldn't be bothered by any "pressure" from Capitol Hill, that Congress ought to appropriate more money for the great task at hand instead of carping at "bureaucrats." In some instances, of course, they are victims of foul play on the part of a few Congressmen who have no sense of either fairness or responsibility. So they are inclined to belittle Congress at every opportunity and to assume that it is always actuated by sordid politics. This seems to justify in many minds more and more freedom of action on the part of executive agencies in making policies and carrying them out.

So the breach between Congress and the administrative agencies is widening month after month. It is evident in the McKellar bill requiring confirmation by the Senate of an enormous number of top-ranking executive employes and in the widespread support that is given to the Dies and Kerr Committees. In the minds of even some legislators who consistently oppose the spoils system the McKellar bill is justified as a means of making executive agencies more responsive to the will of Congress. The Kerr Committee's farcical "trials" without either judge, jury or law are tolerated as a means of striking at crackpots. The simple fact is that Congress is angry and is striking out at "bureaucrats" with any weapon that seems to be handy.

This would be a dangerous situation at any time. It is particularly dangerous now because of the imperative necessity of teamwork in fighting the war and building a peace when the war is over. Congress and the Administration must work together on these projects and any irritants, minor or great, which tend to drive them apart run contrary to the national interest. Certainly each ought to remove these causes of friction wherever possible.

PROBABLY the greatest contribution the President could make to this cause would be the wholesale elimination of incompetents from the Federal service. But no one should suppose that Congress is properly doing its part. It has reason to be perturbed by the vast gangling bureaucracy that has grown up in recent years. But the remedy that ought to be applied is not sniping at individuals. Nor is it the extension of legislative control over executive functions. At bottom Congress is at fault for many of the failings of the administrative agencies because it has not set up the necessary standards to keep them functioning in a responsible and democratic fashion. Why, for example, has it forgotten the administrative law bill that the Senate was so eager to pass before the war broke out?

It is true, of course, that Congress is under a heavy burden of wartime legislation. Perhaps it doesn't have time to consider the bills growing out of the Acheson report and other able studies of our administrative system. But at least it could devote the time that is given to such reactionary measures as the McKellar bill to more basic reforms in the sprawling bureaucracy that it has created.

Congress will not simplify its problem by slugging individual agencies below the belt, as the Cox Committee is doing with the FCC, or by taking over the appointive function. But it ought to be thinking about the infinitely bigger job of enacting legislation to regulate the quasi-judicial and regulatory agencies. One step in that direction is the Connally bill giving the War Labor Board a legislative standing. There is enough to do in this field to absorb every moment Congress can spare, and the net result of attacking the problem at its source will be far more satisfactory than the mere needling of "bureaucrats" to make them wince.

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 18.—While the race for the Republican presidential nomination gives evidence of being a sharp and lively contest, with no one candidate favored by a clear majority of the rank and file at the present time, the situation within the Democratic Party is remarkably different.

No important division of sentiment exists at present among the rank and file of Democrats. President Roosevelt is the choice of the overwhelming majority.

A survey discloses that the vote of preference for Mr. Roosevelt is approximately four times larger than the combined vote for six other men who have been discussed as possible Democratic candidates.

Wallace Ranks Second

Each Democratic voter interviewed in the survey from coast-to-coast was handed a list of seven men including the President who have been talked about in the press and in political circles as possible Democratic standard-bearers for 1944. Voters were then asked:

"Which one of these men would you prefer as the Democratic candidate for President next year?"

The results are:

Roosevelt	79%
Wallace	8
Farley	5
McNutt	4
Douglas	2
Byrnes	1
Winant	1

The contrast between the situation in the Democratic Party and that in the G. O. P. can be seen from the vote of the Republican rank and file in a survery reported earlier this wek. The present preferences of these voters were found to be as follows:

CHOICES OF G. O. P. VOTERS

Dewey	38%
Willkie	28
MacArthur	17
Bricker	8
Stassen	7
Saltonstall	1
Warren	1

The one-sided nature of the Democratic vote makes the present situation closely comparable to that which existed prior to the 1940 Democratic nominating convention.

1939 Survey Cited

In an institute survey conducted in November, 1939—eight months before the 1940 convention—President Roosevelt was the choice of 83 per cent of all Democratic voters polled. The next most popular candidate was John N. Garner, with 8 per cent. President Roosevelt held a commanding lead and in fact gained in popular support in his party as convention time neared. A survey reported June 30, 1940, two weeks before the convention, found him the choice of 9 per cent.

On the Republican side of the 1940 campaign Thomas E. Dewey took the popular lead early in 1939 and continued to be the top choice of Republicans with opinions until the invasion of France in the early summer of 1940, when Wendell Willkie forged into first place as the choice of the rank and file, and, later, of the convention.

Fliers Wait In Dark

Light Fails, Rations Run Short

A story of courage and endurance in the Arctic as told to Capt. Oliver LaFarge by Capt. Armand L. Monteverde, Lieut. Harry E. Spencer, jr., and Staff Sergt. Don T. Tetley.

Copyright, 1943, U. S. Army Air Forces Aid Society.

The motor sled departed from the wrecked B-17 on December 7, leaving the men there in high fettle.

Sergeant Best, whom Monteverde had kept partly because of his ability as a cook, was in good shape and seemed not to have suffered from the injuries to his head when he was thrown against the plexiglass nose of the bomber. That gave them one really ablebodied man.

Moneverde could and did get around, but his feet and hands were still painful from their freezing a month earlier. Spina's broken arm was not yet healed, and because of the break the circulation in his right hand was hampered, so that it easily became frostbitten and pained him a good deal. However, they were all in good enough shape for a short wait.

All that day the weather was fine and they were sure that the sled party must have won through all right. Then the weather turned back to its normal foulness and for awhile they were cut off, but well provided with food.

Radio Light Lost

More serious, with Wedel gone, the generator did not seem to like them, and they were unable to keep it running. With this they lost the use of the radio as well as their light.

The walkie-talkie which Tetley had left them was tuned to the wrong frequency for the B-17, so that did not serve, and even one-way communication from the plane, when it was able to come over, was seriously hampered by the difficulty of dropping notes, as well as supplies, in the very limited area within which they could be picked up.

Monteverde's birthday went by, then more days, and weeks, and they had no news of the sled. Whatever messages were dropped to them about that, they missed. They assumed that those men were safe, and of course had no idea that Wedel, the useful, had been killed within a mile and a half of their camp.

They were told of new attempts with dog teams, which at one time got within about 12 miles of them, but the weeks went on, and then a month, and they were still there and were no developments.

At the B-17 the winds seem to have been particularly fierce; funnelled by some formation of the land, perhaps. The snow drove like sand, and with much the same effect. Even with the Arctic clothing they now had they were really comfortable only when they had crawled well down into their sleeping bags and pulled their heads in.

Picked Up Supplies

They went outside, or one or two of them would go, to meet Turner's plane when it came over, to gather the supplies that were dropped, and to clear the snow off the top of the plane so that they could be seen. For this they used the shovel and the paddles from the rubber life raft.

From time to time some delicacies, such as canned chicken, or ready-fried pork chops, were dropped to them, but mainly they lived on C and K rations. K rations contain cheese, crackers, luncheon meats, soluble coffee, dextrose tablets, and a chocolate compound. Field ration C contains crackers, meat and beans, meat and vegetable stew, or meat and vegetable hash, hard candy, soluble coffee, and sugar.

Both types are finely calculated to maintain health and strength, contain every needed element, but a very long diet of them grows monotonous, and these men subsisted on them for months. Their chief variety was in mixing them, or occasionally in planning impossible menus.

One night they made a sort of fudge, and in this found a good joke about the lack of any cold place to harden it. They used to mix malted milk and chocolate with snow to make ice cream.

Their worst problem was in the matter of light inside their room. Somehow, the candles dropped to them never seemed to last long enough, and then they were in the dark again through the long, dragging night, or if the weather were bad, day and night alike.

Waiting in the Dark

Those were the times that depressed them; when the storms would not let up and supplies ran low, and they lay waiting in the dark, not knowing when they would again have even the comfort of Turner's plane overhead.

The night of January 2 was particularly stormy, with a howling wind. They had enough to eat at that time, and snugged themselves down in their sleeping bags.

Monteverde drifted off into a particularly good sleep when he was wakened by the cold pressure of snow against his head. Thinking that his bag had slid against the wall, he worked it back a little way and slept again, but again the cold pressure waked him.

This time he scratched a match and saw a pile of drift forming high across the windward end of the room, coming in through a very small hole.

The wind was making terrific noises, howling and beating and singing, and scouring the part of their wall which was above the general snow level with the driven, abrasive snow. More holes appeared. They stopped them up with whatever they could lay their hands on and moved their bags to the south side of the room. Whenever they could feel a new drift, they would get up and stop holes again.

This kept up for some time, and the drifts in the room kept getting worse and bigger. They saw that they were losing. So they put their bags in the entrance tunnel and went to sleep.

Fears End Has Come

Monteverde was pretty sure that that was the end and his last sleep, but there was nothing else to do. He got in between the top and second blankets of his bag. The top blanket was frozen, as the moisture from the body collected there, then would melt after a man got inside. This cold sent chills through him, and made him feel more than ever that they had come to the end.

The snow spared them. They awoke in the entrance, snowed under but safe, and emerged to find a calm, clear day.

They immediately set about doing a first-rate job on the north wall, using the very snow which had driven them out to build up an inner wall level with the wing, and of ample thickness. After that they had little drifts in the room from time to time, but nothing to worry about.

Foreign-Born Group Hits Bill Denying Aliens Voice in Unions

The House Labor Committee was told yesterday that legislation denying aliens a voice in labor organizations would "seriously burden" unions many of whose members "would have to produce proofs of citizenship."

The contention was made by Abner Green, secretary of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, New York, who testified at a hearnig held by a subcommittee headed by Representative Scanlon (Democrat) of Pennsylvania.

Green appeared to oppose a bill introduced by Representative Woodruff (Republican) of Michigan.

"The bill legislates against aliens only but its passage would unloose suspicion and antagonism against all foreign born persons," Green asserted.

"The foreign born, as a group, are doing their share for a United Nations victory. Americans of Czech descent in Chicago have given more than two million dollars toward the cost of a new cruiser. Americans of Hungarian birth in New York donated 10 ambulances to the Army. In Bridgeport, Conn., and Passaic, N. J., Americans of Slovak birth provided the fund to buy 3 standard Army ambulances.

"Congress has asked the noncitizens to be ready to give their lives in defense of this country and large numbers of them are bearing arms under our flag. Can Congress now say that they may die for this country, but they may not vote in labor elections nor hold office in trade unions."

Italians Charge British Dropped Explosive Pencils

By the Associated Press

The Rome radio charged Monday night that British planes flying over the capital Sunday night had dropped explosive pencils, lipsticks, handbags and powder boxes on the streets, yards and parks.

The Germans long ago charged the British with scattering explosive pencils. They persistently repeated the charge, until the British announced that the "pencils" either were a complete propaganda fabrication, or else the Nazis were talking of unexploded fuses which resembled pencils.

Ruml, Delano Agree on Need Of Postwar Employment Plan

By the Associated Press

New York, May 18.—Beardsley Ruml, originator of the Ruml tax plan, and Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Resources Planning Board, agreed today that cooperation and collaboration between Government and private enterprise is necessary to cope with postwar employment and production problems.

They spoke at a meeting of the American Society of Planning officials.

Ruml, asserting that the elimination of mass unemployment was the first requirement for the postwar period, said that "many will go so far as to agree" that unless it can be eliminated under a system of private business enterprise, "private business enterprise will be supplanted by some other arrangements for the production of goods and services."

"It is inescapable that the National State, through an explicit and implemented fiscal policy, must complement and supplement the activities of private business in the maintenance of high production and high employment," he declared.

Stating there was no possibility of such cooperation under the present organization of the Federal Government, Ruml said there was lack of a singleness of purpose in the various Federal administrative agencies and in the several congressional committees dealing with fiscal matters, and a lack of close collaboration on fiscal matters between Federal, State and local governments.

Delano said that with proper planning there could be as many peacetime jobs as there are at this time.

"This does not mean regimentation, nor does it mean Government running busines and industry," he continued.

But when war industry is being converted back to peacetime production, he added, Government must be ready with programs to provide jobs and also "must develop measures to encourage the healthy and aggressive development of private enterprise, to stimulate initiative and resourcefulness of management, and to open the channels of investment, large and small."

Advance in Gas Rate Argued Before D. C. Appeals Court

Oral arguments by the Washington Gas Light Co., the Office of Price Administration and the Public Utilities Commission were completed yesterday before the United States Court of Appeals in the utility company's appeal of a District Court decision refusing to allow a $200,000 annual gas rate increase originally permitted by the PUC.

E. Barrett Prettyman, attorney for the gas company, told the court that the wording and intent of the Price Control Act of January, 1942, and an amendment to the act passed in October, 1942, prohibited the President from any control over utility rates.

He said the only provision of the act which had any bearing on the case was the October, 1942, amendment and this only provided that the utility company must give a 30-day notice to James F. Byrnes, chief of the Office of Economic Stabilization, before any rate increase was put in effect. This was done, Prettyman said.

Other Provision

The other provision of the amendment, which had been complied with, according to Prettyman, was that the company must agree to the intervention of the Price Control Administrator.

He contended the PUC did everything contemplated by both the "spirit and intent" of the October 1942 amendment and that it had taken into consideration questions concerning the increase both as to its justification and to the legality of allowing it.

He further told the Court that Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court, who ruled the rate increase to be illegal, in rendering his decision referred to the record of the case which he had never read.

Lloyd Harrison, assistant corporation counsel, representing the PUC, told the court that the sliding scale arrangement, under which the gas company had operated, had saved the people of Washington more than a million and a half dollars since 1934.

Harry R. Booth, attorney for the OPA, argued that the PUC had never fully inquired into all of the factors of the Price Control Act as required by its regulations. He named these factors as: The proper rate base, a fair return to the company and a fair estimate of the operating expenses including depreciation.

Sitting on the bench of the Court of Appeals yesterday were Justice Morris A. Soper of the Fourth Federal Circuit Court of Appeals of Richmond, Va.; Justice Justin Miller and Justice Fred M. Vinson.

A decision is expected before the summer recess of court.

D. C. Evacuation Plans Mapped

the Evacuation Authority, is the third of a series of three.

The first, a "dispersive" plan calls for evacuating to temporary quarters in nearby counties victims that the civilan defense units may not be able to care for.

The second known as the "selective" plan is designed in event repeated bombings make the city unsafe for helpless persons.

The third or "forced" evacuation plan would mean that Washington would no longer be habitable. It takes care of the civilian population. The task of moving the Federal Government to some other point would be the responsibility of the evacuation authority but instructions must come from the Budget Bureau.

Remembering the Nazi fondness for creating panics by seizing radio stations and other news sources, the authority has it figured out that orders to evacuate must come from policemen or air-raid wardens. Under no circumstances, it warns, should anybody take evacuation orders seriously just on the word of radio announcers, handbills—or even newspapers.

Besides Sanders on the Evacuation Authority are Health Officer George C. Ruhland, Welfare Director Ray Huff, Superintnedent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, Randolph Bishop, Edward D. Merrill, Police Capt. Rhoda H. Milliken, Mrs. Harry E. Bernton, Dr. Dorothy Bauldnig Ferebee, Kirk Miller and Dr. H. Gladys Kain. Assistants to Sanders are S. E. Emmons of the Capital Transit Co. and M. C. Eldridge, assistant director of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Sponsorship for Free Lance Hospitality Groups Favored

Unsponsored groups to entertain soldiers should not be stamped out, but rather put under sponsorship, Coleman Jennings, chairman of the coordinating council on home hospitality, told the War Hospitality Committee last night.

The unsponsored groups have arisen partly because girls don't know about sponsored organizations, and partly because the sponsored groups are too full, he said. He proposed that military and naval authorities be asked what policies they favored in the continuing of such groups and that a committee be appointed to formulate sponsorship.

Floyd D. Akers, was reelected president for the coming year. Others reelected were Joseph C. McGarraghy, vice president; Mark Lansburgh, treasurer; Harry S. Wender, general counsel; James A. Councilor, sr., controller, and L. Joseph Cahn, executive secretary.

In a presidential report, Akers said that Recreation Services, Inc., operating agency of the war hospitality committee, now operates seven direct projects, subsidizes seven others under supervision of the District Recreation Department, and is responsible for policies of the Pepsi-Cola Center.

U. S. Workers Plan To Honor War Dead From Their Ranks

Uncle Sam's civilian army—the Federal employes—will pay tribute to their fellow workers who have lost their lives in this war in a simple ceremony at Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds, on Memorial Day at 4 p. m., it was learned yesterday.

An informal organization committee has been formed, in which David F. Lawton, director of personnel, Civil Service Commission, plays a prominent role and which consists of William H. Kuschnik, War Department; Charles Piozet, Navy Department, T. Roy Reid, Department of Agriculture, and H. J. Sarre, Federal Works Administration.

The memorial services will be a vivid reminder, it was stated, of the role Government employes are playing on the fighting fronts as well at the desks which form the headquarters of America's war effort.

Plans for the ceremony have not been completed but it was said that a high civilian Government official will attend and the chief chaplains of the Army and Navy also will be present. The United States Navy Band will provide music.

Little Lew Hanbury now represents the town's last hope of wedging one of its boys into the featherweight title picture. He fights Frankie Callura, the N. B. A. champion on Friday night at Uline's Arena, and the enthusiasm for Hanbury's chances against Callura must be somewhat restrained after what happened to Danny Petro the other night.

POVICH

Like Hanbury, Petro was being regarded as hot stuff out of the local ranks. They matched him against Jackie Wilson, the former N. B. A. feather champion, and Petro petered out as title caliber. It was a clear case of a local kid being overmatched, and that could be Hanbury's fate, too, on Friday night.

That Petro wasn't ready for such opposition as the very clever and very rough Wilson was obvious from the opening bell when Wilson blithely walked up and hit Petro in the mouth with a right hand. For 10 rounds, Wilson laid that right hand against Petro's face and jaw and Danny was pretty helpless about it. The same punches with which Danny had chilled his previous opposition were horrible misses against the smart-moving Wilson.

When they finally stopped it in the tenth, little Petro had given a fine exhibition of gameness and little else. He was over his head in there. The fact is that Wilson had orders to carry Petro in the late rounds and save the local boy the ignominy of a knock-out

There was some surprise in Wilson's corner after the colored boy floored Petro in the ninth. "You're gonna knock this kid out," said Jack Laken, Wilson's manager, "I thought you were gonna let him finish on his feet."

"Not now," said Wilson, "I was going to let him finish, but he hurt me in that ninth round. I can't take any more chances. He hits too hard. He's gonna get it in this round." With no trouble at all, Wilson pounded Petro to the floor in the tenth, causing the referee to stop it.

The chance that Petro had and muffed, to break into the national featherweight picture, is now being offered up to Hanbury. There always has been a debate as to which is the better local prospect, Petro or Hanbury. It was an easy way to start an argument in Washington's fight colony.

It was admitted that Petro was the stiffer puncher, but Hanbury partisans have liked Lou for his greater shiftiness. Both of 'em have always displayed a zest for fighting and have been crowd pleasers. Neither had been tested against the better flight of feathers until Petro ran into Wilson with such disastrous results.

In Callura, Hanbury is meeting up with a rough, tough guy, not quite as clever as Petro's conqueror, but a fellow who knows how to bull his opponent around. That will probably be all right with Hanbury, who likes it that way, too. For a kid, Hanbury has been able to pace himself pretty well.

There have been a half-dozen bidders for the contract of Hanbury who is managed by his father. Despite the fact that fathers and brothers in managerial roles have ruined more good fighters than wine and night life, Hanbury has done very well. To this point, he hasn't been overmatched. There will be more evidence about that item on Friday night when he gets in there with Callura.

Hanbury could be an immense sort of attraction if he gets by Callura. He's a bit on the cocky side. The other night at Turner's Arena, after he and Jimmy Phillips had received the instructions from the referee in the center of the ring before their fight, Hanbury calmly broke away from the conference, stretched his arms lazily and yawned as if in complete boredom.

Hanbury is a little iceman in the ring. One of his punches once killed a lad. When he's hurt, he bares his teeth and snarls, and never gives ground. He strikes poses at the end of each round, and from his stool he glares at his opponent between rounds. He says he'd rather be a fighter than anything else, and he acts like it.

Similarly, there could have been a lot of nice things said about Petro before Jackie Wilson entered Danny's young life. Hanbury has never met up with such an article as Callura. Lew may be overmatched, too, but as we were saying, we'll know more about that Friday night.

Card Hurlers Subdue Dodger Bats, 7 to 1

Pound Wyatt For 5 Runs; Even Series

White and Brecheen On Mound for Red Birds Yields 3 Hits

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 18.—Ernie White and Harry Brechten, a pair of cagey southpaws, put the old silence on the Brooklyn Dodger bats today and the St. Louis Cardinals evened their series with the Brooklyn's, 7 to 1.

A crowd of 11,214 paying customers watched the Red Birds pound the offerings of the veteran Whitlow Wyatt industriously until they had five runs in less than five innings while White, the Card starter, was taking care of the Dodger batters nicely. In fact, when Billy Herman doubled to left in the fifth he was the first Brooklyn player to reach first base.

The Cards started nibbling away at Wyatt in the second inning, singles by Walker Cooper and Ray Sanders and a fielder's choice pushing across one run. With two down in the third Harry Walker doubled, Stan Musial tripled, and Cooper got the second of his three hits for two more runs.

After a walk, a sacrifice, a single and a double by Cooper in the fifth had accounted for two more Card runs, Wyatt was through for the day. Johnny Allen, who relieved Lim, pitched hitless and runless ball until removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth. The Cards fell upon his successor, Les Webber, for four rousing blows and two runs in the ninth, but that was just frosting on the cake, as it was obvious the Dodgers were just the other team on the field today.

Skipper Billy Southworth took no chances when Arky Vaughan and Joe Medwick, the first two men to face White in the seventh, hit safely, Medwick's double bringing home Vaughan with the lone Dodger run. Brechten hustled in from the bull pen, retired the side and stayed out of trouble the rest of the way, allowing no hits.

Giants Errors Give Reds 3-1 Win in 10th

By the Associated Press

New York, May 18.—Two errors aided the Cincinnati Reds to score twice in the tenth inning today for a 3-to-1 victory over the New York Giants.

The winning rally started with a pass to Max Marshall after two were out. Gee Walker singled and Marshall came all the way home when Manager Mel Ott threw wild past first. Walker went to second on the play and when Frank McCormick singled to left Walker scored on an error by Dick Bartel, who deflected Babe Barna's throw.

The Reds scored on two singles in the fifth and the Giants, who were held to five hits, tied the score in the eighth.

Cincinnati used Charley Brewster at second because Lonnie Frey was hit by a thrown ball while sititng in the dugout during the Giants' infield practice. An injury also removed Plate Umpire Beans Reardon from the game in the third inning after he had been struck on the foot by a foul tip from Ray Mueller's bat.

Nats Hope to Play Browns In Double-Header Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, May 18.—The Nats ran into a second consecutive postponement here today, which disturbed Manager Ossie Bluege no little as after the club finally found its batting eye on Sunday the bats have been confined to the bag for the past two days.

Today's scheduled single game was not called until 1:45 p. m. But the Nats were unable to get in any practice licks, although they had been hanging around the ball park since noon, Bluege ordering a workout whether they played or not before he saw the field.

The Browns' management has optimistically scheduled a double-header for tomorrow afternoon, with a single game on Thursday, today's date having been moved back to the Nats' last visit here in August.

Ewald Pyle, who has been ready to pitch since Monday, and Dutch Leonard will face the Browns tomorrow with Manager Luke Sewell countering with Denny Galehouse and Steve Sundra, a former Nat. Sewell has been forced to juggle his batting order with Vernon Stephens out for six weeks with a broken kneecap. The Nats will get a look at both of Stephens' understudies, Mark Christman and Floyd

A Small World

Writer Meets Aussie Cousin Of Ruffing

By William F. Boni
Associated Press Staff Writer

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia, May 18.—Among the people you meet as a war correspondent—

Hitch-hiking a ride back from an American hospital, you are picked up by a sturdy, gray-haired gentleman in a 1924 car which, he tells you proudly, had clocked 258,000 miles up to the moment the speedometer broke last November.

You discuss Australia, only to hear him say that "actually I'm not an Australian—Scotland's my home."

"How long have you been out here?" you ask.

"Fifty years," is the surprising reply.

But the next bit of information is even more startling.

"I have a cousin in America you might have heard of," the gentleman volunteers. You imagine somebody named Johnson in Minneapolis.

"A baseball player—you have seen him play." And your thought switches to some utility outfielder for the Toledo Mudhens.

"His name's Ruffing—Charles Ruffing. Believe he plays with a club called the Yankees."

You agree, quite decidedly, that a man named Charley Ruffing did play for the Yankees.

"His brother's name was Laurie, and that's mine, too," adds the gray-beard, who caps things off nicely by telling you he has a gold mine up in the hills, not as far from G. H. Q. as Coney Island is from Times Square.

Sports Board May Be Named By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt said yesterday he had been considering seriously the creation of a small committee on the status of organized sports during the war.

He told a press conference that no decision has been reached, and he could give no names, but he though probably a three-man group might be appointed, lacking authority, but assigned the task of making recommendations.

There have been suggestions in some quarters that Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York might head such a committee, the Associated Press reported.

The Chief Executive informed his press conference that a large number of letters had been reaching him from proponents of various kinds of sport asking what the White House thought of various problems, such as night games, continuation of sports where transportation is a considerable factor, and so on.

He said he had been thinking about creating the committee to help those who have doubts as to whether organized athletics should go on.

Braves Blank Pirates, 4-0, Get 2 Homers

Workman, McCarthy Slam Ball in Fourth; Javery Hurls Shutout

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 18.—Scoring all their runs in a fourth-inning splurge which included home runs by Charlie Workman and Johnny McCarthy, the Boston Braves blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-0, today for their fifth straight victory.

Al Javery pitched the shutout for the Braves, chalking up his third decision against one defeat and holding at two the number of runs scored off Boston hurlers in the past four games.

The victory enabled the Braves to hold their second-place lead over the St. Louis Cardinals and also to pick up a full game on the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers, who were trounced, 7-1, by the world champions.

Boston's big inning was the fourth and was the only frame in which the Braves were able to handle the offerings of Truett "Rip" Sewell, who limited them to five hits, but suffered his first defeat after winning three games.

Eddie Joost opened the outburst by singling cleanly and Workman followed this bingle with his home run wallop into the right field stands. Apparently upset, Frank Gustine booted a Chet Ross roller a moment later and the big outfielder reached first base safely.

McCarthy wasted no time after this break and walloped Sewell's first offering into the same distant stands where Workman had parked his two-run blow a few minutes earlier.

Manager of Conn Again in Hospital

Pittsburgh, May 18 (AP).—Johnny Ray, manager of fighter Billy Conn, was in serious condition in Mercy Hospital today following a heart attack.

Ray, who piloted Conn, now an Army corporal, to the light-heavyweight title and a heavyweight title bout with Joe Louis, suffered a heart attack three years ago and was hospitalized for several weeks.

for Americans."

In his telegram to The Post, Crosby noted that he would not be able to arrive in Washington until 8:30 p. m., the hour at which the game will start. His train is due at that time, and he will be given a rapid escort to the stadium for an appearance in the middle innings.

The high interest in the war bond game was in evidence yesterday when the banks of Washington, which are distributing game tickets to bond buyers, reported that requests had reached a single day's high.

The Post's aim to produce war bond sales totaling more than a million dollars for the game seems certain of success with estimates that more than $700,000 worth of bond tickets have already been bought.

Admission to the game is restricted to bond buyers, following The Post's bond-game slogan of "every fan a patriot."

All bond buyers who make their purchases at banks or postoffices are entitled to receive an exchange ticket to the game along with their bonds. The exchange tickets may be turned in at Griffith Stadium, on any day, for reserved seats to the game.

Every seat in the stadium has been reserved for the contest, which brings to Washington the most famed service team in the country. The Norfolk sailors boast such former big league stars as Phil Rizzuto, Dominic Di Maggio, Don Padgett, Benny McCoy and Freddie Hutchinson in their lineup. They defeated the Nats in an early-season game.

All box seats given for bonds of the $200 value have been exhausted, it was announced yesterday, but seats for other value bonds are still plentiful.

Many thousands of the choicest grandstand seats which go with purchases of the $50 bonds are still available, as well as choice pavilion seats merited by the $25 bonds. Still available also in large numbers are the $1000 and $100 box seats.

To entertain the early comers at the game, Al Schacht is bringing his famous clowning act to the stadium, at his own expense.

The interhigh race was narrowed down to three teams yesterday as Roosevelt and Central dropped out of the running by losing to Eastern and Wilson respectively. Only Eastern, with five wins, Tech, with four up and one down, and Wilson, with three and two, have any possible chance at the playoffs, reserved for the top two teams of the round robin.

Wilson, behind Jack Ogle, who turned in his third straight series triumph, romped over Central, 11-1. Eastern and Roosevelt battled it out in a real old-fashioned slugfest, with the Ramblers coming out on top, 14-11, to stay on top of the heap.

Wilson 11, Central 1

Wilson got to Ned Brogan, Coach John Jankowski's converted outfielder for a dozen hits and 11 runs while Ogle was scattering five safeties and giving up only one marker. Ogle hurled hitless ball for the first five and two-thirds innings before Joe Tucker rapped out a solid hit over short. Tucker drove in the only Viking score with another bingle that sent Brogan home from second. Tom Sweeney also got a brace of hits off the Tiger slabstar and Pete Chiporous the other. Ogle fanned 15 Centralites and walked only three in winning his third series game and his sixth of the year. He has yet to lose.

In the second inning, Eddie Henshaw presented Ogle with a run to work with when he singled home "Monk" Barbee, who got life on Tucker's miscue. Three hits accounted for a trio more in the third and two safeties a run in the fifth. With Brogan tiring rapidly, Wilson pushed five markers across on three hits in the ninth. "Red" Hayden relieved Brogan with two down in this inning and avoided trouble with the aid of a great catch by Chiporous that robbed Mike Runnels of a home run.

Eastern 14, Riders 11

Roosevelt battled desperately to retain its chance at a playoff berth but the Eastern big guns were too much and the Riders fell by the wayside. Trailing, 14 to 5, going into the first half of the ninth, Roosevelt, playing inspired ball, drove Dave Leonarduzzi, Ramblers' starter and ace, to the showers with a six-run uprising. Little Bucky Glorious was rushed into the fray by Coach Woody Smitherman and after getting in a little more trouble he proceeded to fan the next two Riders nad got the following one on a soft tap to Third Sacker Wilber Osman.

In the first frame the Ramblers found Leigh Joy, Roosevelt starter, easy pickings and sent six runs scampering across the plate, on only one hit. Joy was hurt greatly by his own wildness nad the errors of Third Baseman Fred Kramer. Eastern clinched the outcome with three-run outbursts in tthe third and fifth innings.

Wilson Player Gracefully Slides Into Third Base

Callura Wants Hanbury to Slug With Him

Pleasantly, cocksure, little Jackie Callura, National Boxing Association featherweight champion, yesterday invited Lew Hanbury, local lightweight and a machinist at the Washington Navy Yard, to slug it out with him toe-to-toe in their 10-round nontitle bout at Uline Arena Friday night.

The Hamilton (Ontario) warrior, who won his title from Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson and then made a successful defense of his championship against the same fighter shortly afterward, maintains that all that will be necessary to insure a real war Friday night is for Hanbury to meet him halfway.

"I've been criticized a lot for taking too many chances in all of my fights, but I can't help it," Jackie admitted while ducking into a shower after a public workout at the Apollo Club gymnasium yesterday. "I was born to be aggressive, and I suppose I'll die that way.

"I accepted the Hanbury bout mainly because I was given to understand that he likes to mix it. If the boy can stand up and if he will come out and trade from bell to bell, you'll see one of the greatest battles in local history."

Callura shifted his drills from Uline Arena to the Apollo Athletic Club on short notice yesterday in order to put in some hard licks on the speed bag installed there, and dazzled onlookers with his combination of punch and speed while boxing several rounds and working the equivalent of several more in the gymnasium.

Almost equally as interesting to Washingtonians as the main event Friday night will be the special eight-round return meeting of Frankie Wills, popular District middleweight, and J. R. Lewis, rugged Negro from Denver, Colo.

Lewis turned in a stunning upset of Wills here only last week, a defeat which so infuriated Frankie that he demanded—and received—this return bout on short notice.

Gaithersburg Wins, 3-2, On Friends' Bad Error

Gaithersburg yesterday defeated Sidwell Friends, 3-2, in a seven inning baseball game played on the losers' diamond. The winning run came across when Friends' hurler, Carroll Smith, dropped an easy pop fly. Prior to that he had waged a brilliant pitching duel with the winners' George Rice, who was credited with the victory. Smith struck out ten.

Loyola Knocks Hoyas' Hurlers To Win, 12-9

Loyola College of Baltimore yesterday jumped on two Georgetown University hurlers for 14 hits and a 12-9 victory on the Hoyas' diamond. Joe Wells and Jack Branfield were the victims of the visitors' attack, with the former being charged with the loss. Paul Fick and Nick Pazourek divided the pitching chores for Loyola, with Fick receiving credit for the triumph.

Wells was knocked out of the box in the fourth frame after giving up six runs and eight hits. Branfield finished the game, allowing six safeties and a like number of scores. Fick shut the Hoyas out until the fifth when they got to him for one run. He was gotten to for four markers in the sixth and let two more come across in the seventh. At this point, with the bases loaded, Pazourek came in and quelled the uprising.

Phillies Beat Cubs, 5-4 and Tie For Fourth

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 18.—The surprising Phillies climbed into a tie with Cincinnati for fourth place in the National League by coming from behind to beat the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4, before 20,820 in a night game at Shibe Park tonight. It was the third straight victory for the Phils and the seventh straight loss for the Bruins.

Nats and Browns Play Double Bill

Bob Johnson took advantage of Monday's cancellation to have a tooth pulled which had been bothering him for days. The Browns have the heaviest list of double-headers in the league with St. Louis in the midst of an all-time record month of you-know-what fall. . . . Four Washington players welcomed the cancellations in order to spend time with their families near here: Dutch Leonard, Ewald Pyle, Milton Haefner and Coach Benny Bengough. . . . Leonard happily reports that his son, who was seriously injured when hit in the eye by a swing ax in March, is slowly regaining sight in the eye. . . . The Nats, who were last in fielding at the end of their home stand, have made only six errors in six games in the West, and two of them by Angelo Giuliani, whose back handicaps his play. Jake Early made one and Johnny Sullivan three at shortstop, but there is no complaint with Sullivan's play, which has bordered on the sensational. . . . They're saying that fast ball pitching will bring down Detroit's slugging rookie, Dick Wakefield. His meekest outs in the Nats' series were against Milo Candini, who had speed to burn the two times he faced Wakefield.

Bethesda Golfers Defeat St. John's

Bethesda-Chevy Chase golfers yesterday defeated the St. John's linksmen, 4-3, at Indian Spring Club. Bob Clark of St. John's turned in the low card of 76, while Alton Willett and Jack Lanier, both of Bethesda, had 79's.

B. Clark (St. J.) defeated Willett, 2 and 1; Lanier (B.) defeated D. Clark, 2 and 1. Best ball—St. John's, 3 and 2.

urgdorf (B.) defeated Thomas, 3 and 2; Donnelly (B.) defeated Fleishell, 7 and 6. Best ball—Bethesda, 6 and 2.

Polish Giant Grapples Angel

The original Angel, wrestling freak who has been a smash box office attraction for 4 years, and Ivan (The Great) Talun, 6-foot-7, 275-pound Polish giant, will headline tonight's show at Turner's Arena.

For the first time in his local career The Angel, also known as Maurice Tillet, will meet a man regarded as the world's tallest grappler.

Added interest in tonight's bout is that Stanislaus Zybszko, Talun's discoverer-manager, and Karl Pojello, discoverer-manager of The Angel, were great mat rivals back in the lush days of the sport.

Johnny Long, Baltimore's tripod-shaped shipyard worker, and Dick Leyer of Salt Lake City will clash in the semiwindup, a 45-minute bout. Long is popular here.

Abe Yourist, the New Yorker, and the Red Czar, a masked grappler, will clash in a rematch. Both have asked for a refereeless match. Turner hasn't decided whether he will—or not. They drew last week.

Babe Sharkey will engage Tom Mahoney, while Eddie King will tackle Tom George. First match is at 8:45.

Big Jack Wins Charles Town Central Purse

(Charts, racing results and entries, next page.)

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 18 E. P. Minor's Big Jack, winner at Pimlico, came back with a smashing race here this afternoon to triumph in the Central Purse, featuring the Tuesday program. With Jockey George Acosta doing the booting, Big Jack drove into the finish line a length in front of J. M. Rogers' Happy Slave with Robert J. Hall's Residue third. The crowd made Residue an odds-on favorite but Jockey Sammy Palumbo just couldn't do anything about it.

Big Jack was clocked in 1:48 for the mile and a sixteenth over a fast track and returned $11.20 to his scattered backers.

Happy Slave began as if he meant to make a runaway of the five-horse feature. The 4-year-old opened a five-length lead early and had made it eight lengths as the field went into the backstretch. In the meanwhile both Residue and Big Jack were being allowed to race on their own courage.

Midway of the backstretch, Palumbo placed Residue to a drive and the 6-year-old began cutting down the leader. However Big Jack also rallied and when Residue hung in the stretch drive, Big Jack went on with a rush to win in approved going-away fashion.

Two well-played horses figured in a $37.80 pay-off in the daily double. Jockey Buddy Root booted Fancy Time, owned by S. H. Rogers, jr., home a half length in front of William F. Hitt's Milkwhite. Sir Winks was third to this $7.60 shot. The second event went to J. J. Maddock's Light Tide, a $5.80 favorite. The Sweeping Light horse scored by a neck margin over Zac Pam with Lady Longworth third.

C. E. Nelson's Ballarosa won the fourth event. Jockey A. Prain wore the Washington-owned colors and the 5-year-old mare brought a pay-off of $6.60. Pittsburgh and Chance Oak followed the winner over the line.

Blair Rallies To Win by 8-4

A big sixth-inning, six-run rally, coupled with the relief hurling of Randy Edwards brought Montgomery Blair a well-earned 8-4 victory over Devitt Prep yesterday on the Blazers' diamond. Blair, trailing 4-2 going into the last half of the sixth, came up with its game climaxing rally, which was started by Bill Bates who smote a terrific triple. Following this came four hits, two walks and an error which accounted for the sextet of scores.

Dear Al:

Like the song about the "Watchmaker Man," we don't know how he does it, but he does it." I'm referring to Jockey Leon Garrett, the veteran rider who has been going in excellent style here. The Tennessee boy is no great shucks in getting a horse out of the gate and he is not the punishing type of whip rider. He simply sits on most horses, holds their heads steady and the horses come on. Of late, a majority of them have been winning. The public doesn't have much confidence in Garrett, for invariably his horses are long shots, but the trainers like him. "I'd take Garrett ahead of a lot of the so-called star riders around here," said a conditioner yesterday. Asked why, the trainer replied, "Darned if I know." On last Monday's program Garrett rode three winners by the simple method of biding his time, keeping out of trouble, and holding the horse's head steady in the stretch.

BILL.

First race—DIVIDEND got anchored in the off track last out and should come back with a set of brackets in this field. SWEET ZACA has speed but has been disappointing of late. FLICK is a possibility.

Second race—CLEANING TIME is in rare form and should take care of these. ROUGH GOING likes the track and is dangerous. REMOLEE for the show end.

Third race—SHY MISS has speed and should make the most of the inside position. BRIGHT 'N' HAPPY and MERCILESS for the place and show awards.

Fourth race—DISCRETION is another ready to make the most of the rail position. NEON LIGHT's last was enocuraging. EXARCH would be better suited by an off track.

Fifth race—MISS ADDIE gets my call in this sprint. Needs only the right ride. LINDEN STAR for the place. PALGENE is in good hands.

Sixth race—TRY FLYING, if ready, should lead these to the wire. TWO TIMER had speed at Pimlico. FLYING KILTS won two over this oval.

Seventh race—AT BAT belongs on the top in this company. MEADOW STAR and J. HAL to take the other cash positions.

Eighth race—SAL'S SISTER has the right opposition in the day's finale. G. C. HAMILTON and ALLEN CAID will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Best bet—SAL'S SISTER.

Lewis Matched To Fight Garner Next Tuesday

Stoney Lewis, the WPB worker, and John Garner, both of Washington, were signed yesterday to fight next Tuesday night at Turner's Arena for the District light-heavyweight championship.

The District Boxing Commission has sanctioned the staging of this bout over the 10-round route.

Lewis has lost but three matches in 21 professional bouts. The former newsboy, who has just turned 21, scored a fine victory in Baltimore recently when he decisioned tough Rocky Luciano of Harrisburg, Pa. At Uline's Lewis whipped Lambertine Williams, while in bouts at Turner's the colored battler whipped Johnny Finazzo, Oakie Greer in a return bout; Al Gilbert, flattened Ted Fields, Willis Morris, Kid Wolfe and Bill Thomas.

Garner has had but nine professional matches, but he has won 'em all. The fancy-slugging scrapper is the first local boy to stop Buddy Holmes. He beat Buddy Thomas in an upset; whipped Kid Wolfe and generally has proven a tough customer for any fighter.

Lewis' three losses were to Frankie Wills, Oakie Greer and Howard Bennett.

May Cut War Bond Size

War bonds may be cut in half—but their value will remain the same.

Treasury officials disclosed yesterday that they are considering plans to reduce the size of the bonds to save paper and shipping space and speed up production.

Officials of various government agencies have been asked for their opinion on the proposal, but no decision has been reached.

One proposal was reported to call for the bonds to be reduced to the size of the old dollar bill. That was 3 1-4 x 7 1-2 inches. The present bond is 7 3-4 x 8 1-2.

Last year, he said, the Nation consumed 1,000,000,000 barrels of oil but only 600,000,000 barrels of new reserves were discovered. C. & O. Railway Votes Dividend As Income Jumps

Cleveland, May 18 (AP). — The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway's April net income was $2,681,789, or 34 cents a share, against $1,996,132, or 25 cents a share the same month of 1942. Gross income was $17,405,983, against $15,318,455, and income for the first four months has climbed to $10,408,919, or $1.33 a share, from $7,809,295, or 99 cents a share the same part of last year.

The C. & O. released these figures today as directors declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common, payable July 1 to holders of June 8.

A spokesman for the subsidiary Nickel Plate said there was nothing to announce after the monthly meeting of that road's directors. Nickel Plate preferred stock, in arrears about $69 a share, has been climbing on the New York Stock Exchange recently, although President John Davin has declared no dividends would be voted until financial arrangements were made for some 21 million dollars of bonds maturing in the fall of 1947.

Kettering Cites Planes' Vital Role

Baltimore, May 18 (AP). — Dr. Charles F. Kettering, chairman of the National Inventors Council, told 10,000 workers at the Glenn L. Martin aircraft plant today that "the airplane is to be the determining factor of how man is going to live for many years to come."

Kettering, president of the General Motors Research Corp., and other members of the council, inspected the huge aircraft plant and took part in ceremonies in which two veteran Marauder medium bombers were welcomed "back home."

The two B-26s have been credited with destroying 11 Jap ships between them in Alaskan waters.

The council, organized in 1940 to receive and evaluate all technical war suggestions, held a business session prior to the visit to the Martin plant, and later visited other large war industries of the Baltimore area.

OPA Gives Up Fight to Force Grade Labeling

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Compulsory grade labeling of the 1943 pack of canned fruits and vegetables was withdrawn by OPA yesterday in favor of a compromise which was frankly said to have been forced by strong pressure from Congress and the canning industry.

Described by OPA officials as somewhat roundabout but still a protection to the housewife, the compromise provides:

1. Canners must continue to grade their 1943 pack in accordance with the United States Department of Agriculture grades, and canners' maximum prices will continue to be set by grade.

2. Canners and wholesalers must indicate on their invoices the Government grade of the product instead of having grade labels on each can as originally planned.

3. Retail community-wide dollars-and-cents ceilings, being issued by OPA in principal shopping centers throughout the country, will list canned goods brands by grade, showing the housewife at a glance the grade and the maximum price of a particular brand.

Will Use Present Labels

Instead of labels bearing the designation Grade A, Grade B, or Grade C, canners still may use present brand labels, but the grade of the product covered by a certain brand will be marked on invoices for OPA price control. The housewife will be informed of a brand's grade on the community-wide price lists.

In the OPA listings, the trade term "fancy" or any other brand term for the same degree of quality will be synonymous with Grade A; "choice" or "extra standard" will be synonymous with Grade B, and "standard" will be synonymous with Grade C.

For example, if a processor wishes to sell both Grade A and Grade B peas under the brand name "John Doe," he must sell Grade A as Joe Doe Grade A, or Fancy, or Supreme, or other appropriate term, while his Grade B peas must be correspondingly marked Grade B or Extra Standard, or Superior. The same applies for Grade C.

The compromise plan became effective yesterday.

The original idea of grade labeling was described by former Price Administrator Leon Henderson as the best means of price control.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown said publicly shortly after assuming office in January that the stand taken for grade labeling by labor and consumer groups had his indorsement, emphasizing it was essential both for the protection of the housewife and for effective enforcement of price control.

Retreat Explained

Brown's retreat into compromise was explained by OPA officials as the price administrator's desire to have price control, even though somewhat cumbersome and more difficult to handle for OPA.

Grade labeling has been one of OPA's major headaches of recent months because of exceptionally active proponents and opponents, who practically camped in Brown's office. The issue reached a point where the House Agricultural Committee aired the subject at the Capitol, later voting against grade labeling the 1943 pack.

Proponents argued that grade labeling was the only way for a housewife to know what she was getting and how much to pay for canned goods during times when such information was especially vital. Canners argued that grade labels could not be printed in time for the 1943 pack, unnecesary labor would be expended under the plan, expense would be prohibitive, and general production would be curtailed because of the procedure.

Flintkote Issue Offered

New York, May 18 (AP).—Lehman Bros. today offered a new issue of three million dollars of 15-year 3 per cent debentures of the Flintkote Co., building material makers, at 102.

"The Time For Mediation Is NOW"

On September 28, 1942, fifty-seven famous Americans said:

"Is India America's business? Yes, because we need India's millions on our side against Japan . . .

"Our Chinese Allies are greatly disturbed and are anxious for the allied cause in Asia . . .

"We urge upon President Roosevelt and upon Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek that they recognize the interest of the United Nations in the Indian dilemma and that they use their good offices to ask the British Government and the National Congress of India and other leaders to open new conferences, with mutual determination to find that way of action which will most speedily bring India into the ranks of our allies by beginning now the program of her independence."

The Time For Mediation Is Again NOW

Today, May 19, 1943, this appeal is more urgent than ever:

NOW the United Nations are celebrating their victory in Africa, and can foresee their certain victory in Europe.

NOW President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill are meeting to discuss further strategy for victory in Asia without which the war cannot be finally won.

NOW Allied military leaders of the Far Eastern theater are conferring in Washington to outline further steps.

NOW Madame Chiang Kai-shek is in our country to relieve China's desperate plight.

NOW Ambassador William Phillips, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to India, is in Washington reporting to his chief.

NOW the eyes of the world are on India because India is the key to victory over Japan.

To defeat Japan we need China—a China that is not simply resisting heroically but is fighting offensively.

To sustain China we need Burma.

To regain Burma we need India.

To mobilize India fully we need to free the imprisoned democratic leaders of the Indian people who alone can arouse them to action for victory.

India's millions want the opportunity to fight for freedom. If only a fraction of India's vast manpower and resources are in action today, it is because Indians—like other men—can fight for freedom only if they are themselves free.

WE—the United Nations—must break the political deadlock in India which is a repudiation of all we are fighting for.

NOW —while President and Prime Minister are talking face to face—is the time to set in motion the machinery that will mediate the problem, translate freedom from a word to an act, and give all Asiatic peoples the essential motivation they lack today: faith in our profession of the Four Freedoms for all people.

WPB Staff to Be Cut From 16,316 to 12,942

The War Production Board staff here will be cut from 16,316 to 12,942 after July 1. The '44 budget calls for a minor reduction in the field force, from 6657 to 6452. The board would be given $100,000 to spend without regard to classification, alien, or civil service laws . . . Who'd believe it, but tough old Interior Secretary Ickes has an expert on social functions on his staff? The name of the social expert is C. Earl Leslie and he's paid $3300 a year. Leslie designs invitations, sees that they are sent to the right people, and he keeps fully informed as to social customs, forms, titles, ranks of precedence, etc. Yes: Leslie is on the Secretary's payroll but he has been detailed to the White House for some time and I'd be surprised if the Secretary ever asked him the time of day.

Herbert Lehman, former Governor of New York, who is now chief of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Operations, made the first plane trip in his 65 years recently when he ew to England. He has many memories of the journey, but his pleasantest experience took place on Horta on the Azores.

Lehman was travel-weary when he arrived at the islands. Horta to him was as barren and isolated as hell's half acre. The former Governor was riding into port on a motor launch when he heard someone cry in a thick Brooklyn accent:

"Jeez, fellers, there's the Gov!"

It was a Brooklyn sailor whose ship had been torpedoed. In Horta Lehman met a score of other Brooklyn sailors and they sat down and talked about their favorite subject—the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Warner Gardner, Interior solicitor, is planning to bring all the lawyers in the department under his jurisdiction . . . The Army, it's reported on good authority, will speed up its plans to assign young officers on duty here to field duty. It's rumored that a new order soon will be issued which would require troop duty for the vast majoritw of draft-age officers who now have desk jobs . . . War Department has from 1600 to 2000 employes who work Sundays in the giant Pentagon and now arrangements have been made for them to attend church services during their Sunday lunch periods. Streamlined Catholic and Protestant services—about 30 minutes each—will be arranged by Army chaplains in the auditorium.

A rumor—and a very interesting one—has Supreme Court Justice Owen Roberts being promoted to head up a new agency in the State Department to handle postwar problems. It's now believed to be a certainty that the new agency will be created, and apparently the one hurdle yet to be cleared is the question of who will be placed in charge. Along with Justice Frankfurter, Justice Roberts is reported to have some very definite ideas on the postwar world . . . Federal agencies that are reluctant to hire Jap-Americans should look into the experience of War Relocation Authority. WRA has 17 Jap-American stenos in its office here and several of them are being transferred to other agencies. The agency is now arranging with Civil Service to give exams to other Jap-Americans in its relocation centers, which will result in others being brought here.

Federal Power has adopted a new rule forbidding former employes to appear before the commission within a year following their resignation. . . . National Parks' budget was cut 17½ per cent by the House Appropriations Committee. . . . The House doesn't expect the war agencies appropriation bill to be reported before June 15, which means it'll be a miracle if the war agencies will get their new money by July 1, the start of the new fiscal year. . . . The House has applauded the Geological Survey and the Bureau of Mines for their discovery of critical materials in this country. A survey geologist found a tungsten deposit in Idaho which is now supplying 10 per cent of our needs. The deposit is worth between 15 and 20 millions. Chromite deposits were discovered by other employes in Montana which are producing two-thirds of our requirements.

In his attack on bureaucrats, Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois cited a column in a War Department employe publication headed "Fun After Hours" in which it was said: "Meetings of the House and Senate are still the best shows in Washington. The seats are not as comfortable as some but to any person with a spark of imagination the sight and sound of the country's legislators in one chamber is exciting enough to make up for the lack of a Mickey Mouse." The legislator believes that to be disrespectful and he warned his colleagues that "bureaucracy will grow to the point where it will lick you if you do not meet the issue now" . . . Civil Service Commission employes will work an hour longer on Monday, May 31, in memory of the three commission employes who have lost their lives in the war.

3 District Bills Pass Committee

Senate Group Approves Longer Working Hours for Women Employes

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Bills to put District unemployment compensation on a merit basis, increase working hours for women, and lower property owners' assessments for roads were approved yesterday by the Senate District Committee in executive session.

All three bills previously had been passed by the House, but both the unemployment compensation bill and the bill to permit longer working hours for female employes were amended by the Senate committee.

On motion of Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada two amendments were added to the bill dealing with hours for women. The first insures one day's rest in seven, but permits a 54-hour work-week, and the second limits the bill to June 30, 1945, instead of six months after the war.

McCarran explained that the second amendment, limiting the life of the bill until 1945 or earlier as Congress by concurring resolution might determine, merely brought the bill in line with similar legislation now being passed.

The unemployment compensation bill carried amendments by Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota striking out a House provision which would have made the unemployment tax applicable to nonprofit religious, charitable and educational institutions which seek to influence legislation.

The existing unemployment law provides a uniform tax of 2.7 per cent of the payroll on all employers, which has resulted in a $36,605,256 surplus in the Treasury. Under the bill reported favoraly yesterday employers will be taxed on a sliding scale from the present 2.7 per cent down to one-tenth of 1 per cent, depending on the stability of employment record.

The so-called curbs and gutters bill, reported without amendment after hearings had been held by Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio acting as a subcommittee of one, frees the property owner from the need for paying half the cost of a roadway in front of his house. Under the terms of this bill the property owner will pay only the cost of curbs and gutters.

Plan to Donate Hour Spreads In U. S. Offices

Eager to give tangible recognition of the debt they owe to the men who have given their lives in this and past wars, Government employes are notifying their bureau personnel directors of their desire to volunteer an extra hour of work without compensation on May 31, the day after Memorial Day.

While only a few of Washington's Federal agencies have made definite plans to participate in observance of Memorial Day as a day of additional work rather than as the holiday of past years, the majority of them indicated that they were considering such a commemoration.

A proposal of general participation may be introduced at a meeting of the various directors of personnel to whom interested workers should write today, it was suggested by one official.

Nucleus of the idea was a letter written by seven WPA employes to their personnel head, Carlton Hayward. Dated May 10, it read:

"We don't know what you will think of our suggestion but here it is.

"The employes in our section were talkng about it yesterday, and all of agreed that Memorial Day this year ought to be observed in a special way. Therefore, we would like to propose that WPA employes, and those in other agencies if possible, honor our dead war heroes in the best way we can think of: by working an extra hour on Memorial Day.

"Memorial Day falls on Sunday. But let's work the extra hour the following Monday and dedicate it to all dead heroes, everywhere, and especially, perhaps, to those who made possible our great victory in Tunisia.

"We believe Federal employes would really go for this proposal. In fact, we think it's a grand idea. Just think of it. There are three million Government employes. If every one gave an extra hour, that would mean three million hours for victory.

"Please give our suggestion your earnest consideration."

WPB is still considering the proposal, but word of the seven employes' communication went over to the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture, where a majority of the 400 employes have already signified they will volunteer their services.

Western High School's Co. L Wins First Honors in Drill Test

Western High School's Company L won first honors in yesterday's competitive drill at Griffith Stadium and thereby won the Allison Nailor medal as the spoils of victory for their commanding officer, Capt. Howard Surface. Western's Company K won second place, and Company B from Anacostia, took third.

Sergt. Norman Sawyer of Anacostia won the gold medal as the most distinguished noncommissioned officer, with Sergt. Harvey Hogue of Roosevelt as second, and Sergt. Howard L. Gordon in third place. Silver and bronze medals were awarded for second and third places respectively.

The brigade band, which is composed of selected cadets from all of the high schools, played military music as 2000 high school cadets passed in review. Twenty thousand spectators applauded, the spirit of the boys who were drilling hard under a hot sun. None of the color or pageantry was missing—flags, bands, cheering from the sidelines—as the boys crawled on their knees in the extended order drill to prove theid eligibility to share in the honors. When it was all over they were agreed among themselves that the winning company had won a well-deserved victory.

Captain Surface, 16, of 1449 Forty-fourth Street Northwest, expects to go to Virginia Military Institute upon his graduation in June. He has been in the cadet corps three years and was in the winning company during his first year. His company placed third last year and he says his men had to win, because they wanted the honor for Maj. Bob Clark, who was a member of their company before his recent death.

Col. Wallace M. Craigie, U. S. A., said this was one of the best performances ever turned in during any competition. He thinks this is due to the underlying sense of responsibility the cadets have; they realize they must be well trained in order to serve their country in the armed forces, which they will soon enter.

Col. Edward J. Markham, highest ranking officer in the cadet corps, said Western's Company L deserves the honors they received, and mentions that Capt. Robert Hartline, who commanded Anacostias Company B, which took third place has a brother who commanded the winning company from Anacostia in 1940 and has recently been commissioned in the ArAmy Air Corps.

Capt. George Graves, commander Western's Company K, tried hard to take the first place. He said he is just as happy that his comrades at arms have taken the honor.

D. C. Now Labor Recruiting Pool for War Industries

Washington, two years ago, one year ago, six months ago the mecca for all types of labor, today is exactly the reverse—a pool for labor recruiting for warworkers for other parts of the Nation.

Such an over-all statement, of course, must be qualified to specific sorts of labor, the unskilled and the mechanical trades, for there still is need for white collar workers above the supply.

Several war industries, meanwhile, are recruiting labor forces through the United States Employment Service here, notably Henry J. Kaiser's Pacific Coast shipyards and the Carnegie-Illinois steel plants in the Pittsburgh area.

The supply is being drawn from the construction projects in the District and vicinity. Many of them have been completed within the past few months, and there is less new construction to take up the slack here.

Carnegie-Illinois, without any advertising before Monday, set out to recruit 250 Negro workers for its steel plants by last night and in the two days was able to gather nearly 200, some of whom left by special bus last night. Others will leave today and tomorrow. Most of those hired were not District residents two years ago and had been attracted here by the construction work offered—work on the Pentagon and other war installations. They'll work at the coke ovens and at other tasks in the steel mills.

The ones recruited for the shipyards were mostly a nonpermanent residential nature as well—carpenters, steamfitters, electricians and the like, who move where the work is.

Arriving on their new jobs, they will be directed to places to live, for companies recruiting men must show USES that there is adequate housing available for them.

So far the labor pool isnt especially large, and the influx of workers has not reached anything like the proportions of the steady tide of construction workers that began before Pearl Harbor and has continued up to some six months ago.

The District War Manpower Commission doesn't have exact figures on just how many workers have been recruited here recently, but every worker who was procured through its offices was in a nonessential industry at the time of his hiring and went to fill a job that could not be filled in the vicinity where he was to be placed.

Both are special types of labor, not especially needed here, for the USES will not certify a worker for a job in another area if there's something in an essential line he can fill in the locality in which he is living.

Agencies Order 5-Cent Hotel Phones

PUC and FCC Wage War on Present 10c Toll In Hostelries

Guests in Washington hotels, apartments and clubs soon may be able to make local telephone calls for a nickel and will have the hotel surcharges lifted from long distance calls, according to reports issued independently yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission and the District Public Utilities Commission.

These findings, which are in effect tentative orders, were the result of joint hearings held by the two commissions more than a year ago, and of separate studies and considerations given since then to the question of 10 cents local calls and extra-rate long distance charges from hotel rooms.

Both commissions claimed jurisdiction over "interzone" calls in the Washington metropolitan area. These are the calls made to adjacent suburbs to households that have the retained service from local exchange rather than through the Washington extended service. Because of this option, one house in Silver Spring, Md., might be on the Silver Spring exchange while the house next door would be on the Washington Shepherd exchange.

The twc commissions are agreed that the PUC has the say about charges on the Shepherd phone, but each says that it has control of regulating the Silver Spring phone in the next house. No major controversy is expected to arise over this point, however, PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan said.

After warning that the tariffs should be filed, the FCC report stated that an appropriate order will be issued. The PUC gave the respondents until June 7 to file exceptions to its findings of fact.

The principal exception expected is to the PUC's contention that so far as the telephone service is concerned, the hotel is only acting as the telephone company's agency and therefore has no cause to charge for any special services that may be offered by the hotel.

Plane Drive Aides to Sell Selves in Film

Eighty Honor Guards of the recent GOVERNMENT GIRL presentation exercises in Washington and several hundred key workers in the campaign to purchase Army and Navy fighter planes, Friday night will see themselves as others see them.

Guests of The Washington Post and the Council of Personnel Administration the Government employes will attend the showing of newsreels of the ceremony May 9 when the warplanes were turned over to the Army and Navy.

The reels will be shown in the Department of Commerce auditorium at 8 p. m. The "shots" were made by the Fox Movietone Co. and developed by them especially for the Friday night showing.

Although the Government Girl Warplane contest contributions had been scheduled to close three weeks ago and at that time was expected to reach $50,000, total contributions announced yesterday by L. L. Collie, Chief of the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants, Treasury Department, were $157,560.12.

The final contribution of $47 was made by the Federal Works Agency.

Mrs. Randle Goes On Trial in Annapolis Today

Annapolis, Md., May 18.—Attractive Mrs. Helen Aileen Randle, who is accused of killing a 17-year-old high school boy and wounding her wealthy horseman husband last January 31 during a domestic argument, will be called for trial tomorrow.

Mrs. Randle, the 31-year-old wife of Ulmo S. Randle, 34, a chief petty officer in the Coast Guard, was indicted May 3 on a charge of murder in the slaying of young Allen Willey, Annapolis high school student who died in a hospital the day after he was shot.

She also was accused of assault with intent to murder in the wounding of her husband, who was shot in the leg.

Mrs. Randle will be defended by William Curran, Baltimore attorney, and Attorney George E. Woelfel of Annapolis. State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson will represent the State in the case.

Fall From Ladder Kills Joseph Lepore

Joseph Lepore, 56, of 3332 P Street Northwest, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital from head and chest injuries suffered a few minutes earlier when he fell 15 feet from a ladder to a brick pavement while he was repairing wires in the rear of the Healy Building at Georgetown University.

Family of 5 Lives Waterless In D. C. Condemned House

At 126 C Street Southwest, an old red brick house in the final stages of decrepitude leans against its neighbor at 128 C Street amid a welter of broken bottles, rusted tin cans and a miscellany of refuse.

"Both those places have been condemned since last summer," a nearby householder told The Post. "The Government owns them, but it hasn't evicted the tenants because they have no place to go," she said.

Mrs. Alberta Taylor lives at No. 126 with her husband and three small children. The six rooms are filthy; the floors have not been washed in almost a year.

"How can I wash anything?" Mrs. Taylor pointed to a rusted kitchen sink. "We haven't had any water at all in this house since last year, when the house was condemned."

Her pleas to the District Commissioners have brought only the reply that water cannot be turned on in a condemned building.

The family depends even for its drinking water on what they can get from neighbors. There are no lights or sanitary facilities of any description at either 126 or 128, where an aged woman lives with her 13-year-old grandson under identical conditions.

"The Government has been very kind to us," Mrs. Taylor asserted. "We have been asked to move, but when I explain to the inspectors that we have no place to go they let us stay on. No, we pay no rent."

But Mrs. Taylor would gladly pay for "just any decent place to live," she said. Her husband earns an adequate salary as a plasterer and they could easily afford it.

She looked unhappily at her three children, aged 1, 3 and 5. "God knows how they'll grow up in a place like this. But I can't find another place to take them."

She appealed to the Alley Dwelling Authority several months ago, Mrs. Taylor said, but was told only warworkers could be given housing.

This entire neighborhood is dotted with condemned houses, almost all vacant and boarded up. Each bears a "no trespassing" sign over the name of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, a Federal agency now engaged in the Government's home-conversion program for warworkers.

Many of these houses, like the two at 210 and 212 Second Street Southwest, are in fairly good condition, but, although they have been vacant from two months to more than a year, no attempt has yet been made to convert them into usable homes. At a casual count, there were 12 of them: the two on Second Street, two in the 100 block of Canal Street, three in the 400 block of First Street, three on Canal Street, off Delaware Avenue; one at 110 D Street, and one in the 100 block of C Street.

Tenants in this Southwest area, however, anticipate an extensive building program soon. Since most of the occupied houses in the abovementioned blocks are also under Government control, many fear possible eviction from their homes when the conversion program goes into full swing. Several, like the family at 108 Canal Street, have already received their eviction notices.

And their worries all take the same form: "The Government cares only about warworkers. But what about us? Where will we go if we're evicted?"

Religion Seen Postwar Aid For Problems

Scientific methods, if spiritually and morally motivated, can serve as a potent factor in postwar reconstruction.

That was the gist of a panel discussion last night at the Washington Hotel under the auspices of the Washington Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Second in a series of three discussions on the general theme of "Inter-Religious Fellowship as the Power in Postwar Reconstruction," the topic was "The Scientific View of the Problem," with the following panel participants:

Dr. Charles A. Hart, associate professor of philosophy, Catholic University; Dr. Harold Gosnel, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago, and at present with the Budget Bureau, and Dr. Margaret Meade, assistant curator of the Museum of Natural History, New York City, on wartime loan as secretary of the committee on food habits of the National Research Council. Dr. Paul F. Douglass, American University president, was panel leader.

First to speak, Dr. Hart held that the whole approach to postwar reconstruction is a moral issue, and scored modern secular education as "anti-Christian and pagan."

He said that American parents are demanding moral and religious training in the educational system, and that "the rank and file of American citizens are miles ahead of educators and their leaders."

Dr. Meade contended that it is not enough to believe in the brotherhood of man "if you don't know how to turn them into brothers," and added that science must implement those values common to all religions. We must use the essentials of all great religions to build the postwar world, she said. Denominational ties between people of all lands will transcend nationalistic lines in the long run, she predicted.

Dr. Gosnel spoke of the role of what he termed the Government's "hush-hush" agencies in combating race-hating tendencies.

Banta Named To Direct Job Service

K. Vernon Banta has been appointed director of the United States Employment Service, Remy K. Deschner, Area War Manpower director, announced yesterday. Deschner previously had administered the post.

Deschner also announced that the Area WMC headquarters had been moved from the District Employment Center, 505 K Street Northwest, to the Rochambeau Apartments, 825 Connecticut Avenue.

The new Employment Service director was loaned from the WMC where he had been serving as chief of the Bureau of Placement.

Meanwhile, Deschner said the local job stabilization plan would be ready for submission to the regional office here soon. Regional Acting Director Leo B. Warts of the WMC said he "anticipated no conflicts with the Region IV plans now operating in the District area.

Deschner had been serving in a dual capacity until Banta took over as director for the Employment Service last Saturday.

"It's a big load off my mind," Deschner said, "with my full staff and the area labor rearrangement committee to help out the war manpower situation here is far from hopeless.

Banta came to Washington in 1939 from Minneapolis where he had been associated with the Carnegie and Rockefeller Foundations and the Labor Department. He had previously been in the State employment service of Minnesota.

The Area WMC staff under Deschner consists of Gerard Beekman, assistant director; E. E. Knott, area chief for Labor Utilization; Jack Serber, economist.

Early next week, Deschner said a representative for the directors will be named liaison agent for handling all matters pertaining to the Selective Service System which will include also labor placement of war casuals.

OCD Offers Compromise In D. C. Issue

New Instructions Expected to Clear Friction Between Committees, Wardens

The status of the District civilian defense area committees as an "organizing and advisory group primarily responsible to the citizens of its area" was specified yesterday by Civilian Defense Director H. C. Whitehurst in a memorandum superseding OCD Instruction 48, whose ambiguity had caused increasing friction between the defense committees and the warden service.

In many ways a compromise offer to the Defense Council, which had some time ago threatened to resign unless the situation was cleared up, the new order allows air raid wardens to solicit funds for civilian defense purposes—but only as private individuals.

Since it would be difficult for a warden to dissociate himself from his warden's interest in asking for money for civilian defense, this was generally interpreted as meaning that he just must not wear helmet, armband or insignia when asking the neighbors for money for a new stirrup pump or whatever else the warden post might want.

The order makes deputy air-raid wardens ex officio members of the area committees, but forbids them from being elected to it. In fact, no member of the protective services may be on the committee. The deputy warden "should" attend committee meetings, and the committee chairman should return the call and attend warden meetings, Whitehurst said.

In response to the committee's insistance that members should be given identification cards to get them around in blackouts for review, Whitehurst replied that upon request he would recommend to the police chief that proper means of identification be issued to not more than two bona fide members of the committee for making their inspections.

The financing of area defense should be done by yearly estimates and should be raised by public subscription, the memorandum stated. Periodic auditing and annual public financial statements were prescribed so the funds would be "safeguarded in every manner."

Error Regretted In Reporting of Jury Indictment

The Post regrets an error made yesterday in reporting the District grand jury indictment of David Wilford Jaloway, 37, of Houston, Tex., on a charge of bigamy.

The indictment charges that Jaloway married Mary R. Pumphrey, 1214 B Street Southeast, on December 25, 1942, in Washington while a marriage he had contracted in Houston in 1925 to Artie Mae Hollingsworth still was in effect.

In her statement Mrs. Mary R. Pumphrey Jaloway said that she had married William W. Greene in 1932 in Waldorf, Md., and was divorced from him here in March, 1941. She married Jaloway the following year. She did not marry Jaloway twice, as The Post stated erroneously.

EMILY DICKINSON

Just imagine, for instance, being the "Duchess of Windsor . . . and having all the women of the country examining your latest newspaper photograph with gimlet eyes to see if you have taken on a pound of flesh—or lost one, if any crows' feet are discernible around your eyes, if your dress still has that Paris-Riviera dash . . . and having gossips throughout the world training their mental spy glasses on you and your husband, ready to grab triumphantly at the slightest look or word as evidence of a rift between you . . . and of having the whole world on guard to see if you are slipping, if you are walking the tight rope as you should, if you are perpetually living up to the highly romantic and exacting role assigned you in life's drama.

Just imagine being Mrs. Roosevelt—or the wife of any President, or for that matter presidential candidate . . . and having 130 million people with definite ideas (and usually expressing them) on how you should mold your personality to suit them . . . and hearing them advise on how you should dress, do your hair, entertain, shake hands, what kind of friends you should consort with, how you should bring up your children, feed and manage your husband, how you should behave in a reception line or on a platform . . . and having constantly to balance yourself on an unstable marble pedestal to please those would idealize you, and at the same time dodge the mud balls of those who would spatter you.

Just imagine being the Queen of England . . . and having always to dress like a queen (and never have a chance to try out a pair of slacks or a little peasant number or a devilish black creation) . . . and of always having to look ready to head a reception line when you step out of your boudoir and never being able to run downtown in any old thing on the chance you won't run on to anybody you know) . . . and always having to exhibit a queenly posture, and a queenly smile, and queenly reserve and decorum . . . and of having to be properly innocuous in conversation (and never being able to listen to a bit of gossip or repeat it) . . . and of having to spend your life setting a good example, and being the personification of the ideals of all the people in the world who have ever read fairy tales.

Just imagine being a best dressed woman . . . and of having to live up to it in these days of shortages and shopping difficulties, to say nothing of income taxes . . . and of having to go around home (even perhaps when doing your own work) looking like a Vogue magazine hostess for fear a neighbor or a tradesman will run in on you . . . and of having to dress for the approval of your worst enemy every time you venture out of the house

Just imagine being a beauty queen . . . and of being whispered about and pointed at and of having every girl or woman you meet look you over critically and show by her face that she is thinking "That! Why even I" . . . and of having always to be beautiful and glamorous and never being able to let your hair go another week, or be caught with a shiny nose or an extra ounce around the midriff . . . and of having next year come and a new queen hailed and yourself dethroned . . . and of having as you get older (and fatter), people constantly reminiscing about how beautiful you were WHEN . . . and of going on through the years hounded so persistently by your past that you cannot live up to your future.

Fruits, Vegetables Improved in Supply, Quality

Cabbage is the vegetable of first interest on the Washington wholesale market at this time, according to the Market Reporter of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This cabbage is the green, domestic round type. It comes from Florida, Georgia and the Carolinas. Besides being excellent for cooking, it is good for salad purposes. The supply has increased over that of a week ago, but the quality is good so that the price remains practically the same. Supplies of iceberg lettuce are arriving much more freely on the market. The quality too is improving, causing it to stay at ceiling prices. A welcome newcomer on the local wholesale market is an ideal salad lettuce, known as the Big Boston, coming from the Carolinas.

The supply and the variety of snap beans are increasing. They are all stringless and include Black Valentines, Plentifuls, Bountifuls and Tender Greens. The quality is on a high plane but along with the increase in variety and supply, the price shows a slight decline over last week. A new arrival in lima beans. They are of good quality. Since they are in great demand, they also are high in price.

Corn from Texas, fairly new on the market, is increasing in supply, and the price lower, although it may not compare with corn grown nearby, later on. Both the yellow and white varieties are of good quality. Shipments of greens from nearby producing areas are increasing in supply. They are arriving in good condition, and the price trend is downward. In this group you may choose to suit individual tastes for the "green" family includes many varieties, among the most popular being: spinach, kale, mustards, turnip tops, poke salad, rape and dandelions. The quality of asparagus is good and is now arriving from nearby sections, although the price varies according to the size, it remains at about the same level as a week ago.

In the fruit line, the week begins with a good supply of avocados on the local wholesale market. The quality is "tops," and the price likewise in the upper brackets. There is both a greater supply and more varieties of strawberries on the market. The quality is good, but they are meeting an active demand and remain high in price.

Choose Your Child's Camp Carefully

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Are you going to send your child to camp?

Almost every child should and can profit by the experience of camp life. There is no easier way to make a delightful discovery of the fact he or she can be contended and happy away from the family, a discovery fateful for the development of an independent personality.

Not all problems of dependence or of unsociable qualities are solved merely by sending a child to camp, but certainly they can be helped. In a new environment, under the influence of different personalities, children can forget some of the behavior which has become fixed and seemingly unalterable in their old surroundings.

Once one has decided camp life would be good for a child, then what type of camp? The parent has a personal responsibility to investigate the camp. Is it on a healthful site? Is it possessed of good water? Are the small campers protected by a doctor, either in residence or nearby, as well as a graduate nurse in case of emergency? Are food handlers persons of good health, tested for tuberculosis and typhoid, so that no child eating food handled by them will be in danger?

What of the individuals who will live so close to the child as to make a lasting impression upon him or her? There may be a long and impressive list of counselors and the director may be supposedly well qualified for his job.

The Sooner We Stamp Out the Black Market, the Sooner We'll Have Meals Like This Again.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Martha Ellyn

Like the return of the swallow, old food standbys like meat and potatoes will be welcome news. Homemakers have in former days started planning meals with "meat and taters." Now, they often arch their eyebrows and consider whether these foods smell to high heaven of the black market.

It is to be hoped that the "Nine Wise Men" appointed to the newly created Meat Board will put black market meat on the run. But these nine men, or many such groups, can't do the job alone. They will need a supporting cast which will have to be the American cooks. It is up to them to see that they are not contributing to a black market—thereby prolonging its existence.

Many women are standing pat and refusing to pay the higher black market prices. Several days after I had given the OPA ceiling prices on quick-frozen poultry in this column, I received a letter from one of my readers stating that when she called to order the fricassee cut of quick-frozen poultry, she was quoted a price of 79 cents a pound. She had read that 65 cents was the ceiling price. The owner advised the woman that he was reading from the OPA ceiling price list. This was untrue. Here is a case where the merchant should see his oculist twice a year.

If every food shopper who experiences irregularities in ceiling prices would refuse to buy as this woman did, and would report discrepancies to the OPA, and they in turn would take steps to bring the black "marketeers" into line, such practices would not long continue.

To know that you are getting the specific grade of meat for which you are paying is difficult. Grades AA, or A are not designated on each and every cut of the animal carcas. So when you go to buy a porterhouse steak, the ceiling price of which is 65 cents, you do not know if you are getting the top grade or the A grade whose ceiling is 61 cents. The only way to know you are getting the grade of meat for which you pay is to shop with a reliable dealer. And don't pay 75 cents for a steak even though your mouth is watering.

Pictured today is a normal meal, meat, parsley, potatoes and bacon. This kind of meal will return all the sooner if everyone cooperates and brings back a more normal flow of foods at prices established by the Government.

Newspaperman Defends Much-Abused 'Roderick,' And Reminisces About His Own Difficult Boyhood, When People Detested His Well-Mannered Conduct

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a newspaperman and a one-time resident of Washington, although more recently my work has kept me in and around New York City. I am moved to offer some comment in defense of "P. H. D.," with whose viewpoint I sympathized on chancing to read his letter in your space of May 3. Incidentally, I am by no means a devotee of advice columns, but several years ago I happened to dip into your column and found it so different from and superior to other newspaper features of supposedly like nature that I still keep an eye on it.

While sympathizing with P. H. D., although a little amused that a man should be writing you his unflattering opinion of the neighborhood kids, I didn't give the matter a second thought until I read with amazement the vituperative reaction of the general public—which you published serially in subsequent issues, beginning May 6. I could hardly believe so much venom could be directed at a family of gentlefolk, only because they uphold a strong preference for civilized behavior. Truly the mob is fired with a burning desire to smear and tear down anything it instinctively recognizes as being superior. To P. H. D.'s derisive critics, I seriously say heredity and family background DO count. As the proverb says: "Blood will tell."

My heart goes out to Roderick, the 5-year-old son in P. H. D.'s family, who came in for much "guying" from your audience. In some respects, I was just such a child as he. Or maybe I'd better qualify the claim; for obviously Roderick is charming, intelligent and unselfish; and naturally I am incapable of judging to what extent I had these characteristics. But I do know that some persons were devoted to me, while others—children and grownups—deeply detested me for no sensible reason. I daresay Roderick could say the same. Looking back on my boyhood in a Southern city, I realize now that a vast amount of sadism is vented on children, under the guise of "teasing," or of "toughening them up for their own good."

'Too Damn Dignified,' One Child Told Him

Roderick has at least one advantage over me, in that he has a sister. I was an "only child," and not quite as strong physically as most boys my age in the neighborhood, although several years ahead of them mentally. I had friends my own age and also some grown-up pals, and association with the latter gave me a kind of composure which once caused a little girl of 7 to say to me scornfully, "You're too damn dignified." I have no idea where or how she picked up that three-syllable word "dig-ni-fied," but plainly she thought it a terrible epithet.

Thanks to my mother, I learned to read a year before I started to school, and sometimes I used to read aloud to groups of youngsters my age, at their request. At such times I seemed to hold them spellbound, much to my surprise; and I remember I could hardly believe some of them could find enjoyment in a pastime so civilized. But in rough-and-tumble play I was no match for them. They made me feel plenty lacking. And speaking of sports, while I certainly never consciously considered the words, "good sportsmanship," I practiced their meaning as a matter of course—probably because my father had a high sense of honor and conveyed it to me. I cannot say as much for my little playmates, and often I was furious and baffled to see them cheating just for the fun of cheating. But recently I read that the Spanish have a proverb to the effect that "There are two places where one can always tell a gentleman for sure: at the table, and in a game." And at the risk of inviting your readers' ridicule, I firmly say: I was always kind to younger and smaller children; I despised bullies; was deeply sympathetic with the weak, ailing or unfortunate, and passionately fond of pets.

Nearly Died Laughing When He Used Big Word

A few years ago I chanced to meet again one of my former so-called playmates, a girl a couple of years older than myself. She said: "I'll never forget the time somebody asked you some question and you said, 'It depends upon circumstances.' All of us like-ta-died laffin'." I must confess I could not recall that particular incident, but no doubt it occurred, for I went through many such. Discouraging fact: It was screamingly funny to a bunch of male and female hoodlums that a boy of 12 should casually use a common but four-syllable word like "circumstances." My most intimate friend was an English boy whose background was comparable to mine, and whose parents, like mine, did not regard all indications of sensitivity, refinement, love of the beautiful, studiousness, etc., in a boy as hallmarks of a "sissy" unfit to associate with red-blooded Americans.

In conclusion, some comment about Washington: I never considered the Capital City a tough place in any sense, although I didn't live there until I was grown. Years of residence there left me with pleasant memories, in the main. We were there from the end of the last war until the beginning of the depression; and I have never known a big town to change so much in so short a time—and all for the better, I might say. However, I am glad I am not in your city today, because I realize that impressions of a city are a matter of individual experience, and I am not sure that I would be happy there now, in these war-boom times.

If You Admire Quiz Kids, Why Heckle Roderick?

As for the younger generation, in Washington and elsewhere, so far as my observation goes, the present crop of children is by and large the finest the Nation has yet produced. Certainly they are far superior in every way to those I knew in the various neighborhoods where I grew up. But it is depressing to note—from the "going-over" your hostile contributors gave P. H. D. and his son Roderick—that there are still elements in our population who worship uncouthness for its own sake. Let us hope these elements are on the wane. In a Nation where radio's "Quiz Kids" are affectionately glorified, winning general acclaim for their poise and intellectual prowess, and where special symphony concerts and special art classes for children are becoming the order of the day, in such a land, surely there is a place for Roderick. And I say: More power to him. Sincerely yours, S. P. N.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

MISS MARGUERITE RAWALT

Eleanor DeSale Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Charles S. Iversen

Ceremony Yesterday Takes Place in St. Thomas Church; Northern Honeymoon

Miss Eleanor Jeanette DeSale of Washington and Camp Springs, Md., and Lieut. Charles Soren Iversen, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Iversen of Washington, were married yesterday at 6:30 o'clock, the ceremony taking place in St. Thomas Church with the rector, the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson officiating. White spring flowers and palms were used in decoration. Loyal B. Aldrich gave a program of wedding music and Lieut. (j.g) R. N. Hoffman, U. S. N. R., was the vocal soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by Robert Wolverton. She wore an ivory satin gown made with a square neckline trimmed in lace, a long torso bodice and long sleeves ending in points. The full skirt fell into a train and her finger-tip veil of illusion was held with a Juliet cap of seed pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and roses. Her ornaments were a gold heirloom bracelet set with diamonds and pearls, and a strand of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. M. M. Alexander, the matron of honor, wore a Nile green marquisette gown with an orchid colored halo veil and matching gloves. She carried a nosegay of yellow roses and orchid colored sweet peas.

The other attendants were Miss Virginia McClure and Miss Margaret Ink and Miss Henrietta White, who were classmates of the bride at Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va. Their gowns of blue, pink and yellow chiffon were fashioned with fitted bodices and sweetheart necklines and they wore matching halo veils. They carried old-fashioned nosegays of blue, pink and yellow spring flowers.

Best man was Lieut. Charles B. Hutchinson, U. S. A., and the ushers were Lieut. Erasmus Kloman, jr., U. S. A.; Lieut. Hunt Berger, U. S. A.; Lieut. Bradernax Cameron, U. S. A., all classmates of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Hotel 2400 after which the bridal couple left on their wedding trip to the Berkshire Mountains in Massachusetts. The bride wore for traveling an azalea red suit with navy blue accessories and a corsage of white orchids.

Here for the wedding were the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Soren Iversen; his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Iversen, of New Haven, Conn.; Miss Frances Weisiger, Miss Ann Hatcher, Miss Betty Hatcher and Miss Marjorie Hyatt, classmates of the bride.

Lieutenant Iversen is a graduate of Princeton University in January where he was a member of the Cloister Inn Club.

Marguerite Rawalt, Wife of Army Major, Returns From Coast

By Martha Rhyne

Back in town after a well-earned and all-too-short vacation on the Gulf Coast is Marguerite Rawalt, newly elected first woman president of the Federal Bar Association.

She's one of those very busy people of which Washington boasts. On her shoulders she carries the presidencies of two national organizations, that of the aforementioned Federal Bar Association, which draws its membership from attorneys in the service of the United States, and the National Association of Women Lawyers. She's also a member of the House of Delegates in the American Bar Association. Then there's her regular job as special attorney in the office of the Chief of Counsel of Bureau of Internal Revenue.

A native of Prairie City, Ill., Miss Rawalt went to Texas, the land of dreams, at an early age and that State visibly holds first place in her heart. She reminisced of her pre-legal course days at the University of Texas, the quaint charm of old San Antonio, and the lively feud between the University of Texas and Texas A. & M. With nostalgic notes, she remembered the changeable but delightful Texas climate.

Secretary to Former Governor

As secretary to one of Texas' most colorful personalities, former governor Pat M. Neff, she came to Washington as his secretary when he was a member of the United States Board of Mediation.

She told of her first days in Washington when she eagerly spoke of going to "Georgetown," which she had confused with George Washington University. (There she had planned to enroll in law school.) She took a terrific amount of teasing from her office associates before she found out that Georgetown was non-coeducational in the strictest sense. Years later, remembering the incident, genial Pat M. Neff appointed Miss Rawalt to represent the Baylor University and College in a celebration at Georgtown where dozens of schools from over the Nation were represented. At last, she got a chance to "go to Georgetown."

Elected President Of Bar Group

A successful career woman who has not lost her feminine touch is Miss Rawalt, who is tall and imposing. Although she is one of the only two women who have held office in the Federal Bar Association and the only woman president, she is a lawyer. She feels that ability, and not being man or woman, is the accomplishment which counts.

In her very happy private life, she is Mrs. Harry Secord, wife of Major Secord, a Regular Army officer of the Air Corps, now stationed at Gulfport Field in Mississippi. It was with him that she spent that vacation about which she is still most enthusiastic.

Minimum Fanfare Attends Arrival of Duke and Duchess of Windsor; Guests at Embassy; Churchill Still Holds Spotlight

A few years ago, anybody in Washington would have sworn it never could happen here; yet yesterday, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor slipped into town with such a minimum of fanfare that some of their best friends did not know of their arrival.

For several days rumors have made the usual rounds that the woman Washington used to know as Wallis Warfield and the former King of England were coming down from New York for a brief visit before returning home.

"Of course we'll stop by the Capital before we go back," the Duchess said the other day. "That's just like home to me. Wouldn't think of leaving the country without going there."

It's a striking sign of changing times that the couple who had all us Washington newspaperwomen writing countless columns speculating on whether the two would visit here a few years ago, are reporting their current trip to Washington as just another routine event.

"That's exactly the way both of them would want it," a close friend of the Duke and Duchess said yesterday. "Last time they were here, they promised to come back soon . . . and often enough so their trips here would drop out of the headlines."

Anyway, they are staying at the British Embassy. They are quietly seeing some of their relatives and close friends here—Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman (the Duchess' "Aunt Bessie"), Mrs. George Barnett, the Duchess' cousin; Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, who has visited the couple in Nassau; Clarence Hewes, who entertained for them here on a previous visit and has known the Duchess for years, and a few others.

"The Duke of Windsor has come here to attend to some business in regard to the Bahamas," said a spokesman for the British Embassy. "He will have a number of conferences during his stay."

Would he see Prime Minister Churchill? The answer was, "Undoubtedly. Just when, however, I cannot say. The meeting between the two was not on the Duke's original calendar because his visit was arranged long before it was known the Prime Minister would be here at the same time."

As everybody knows by now, of course, Winston Churchill has at least one appointment tomorrow that is not a secret. At 12:30 o'clock when he addresses a joint session of Congress every available gallery seat will be taken.

No sooner had the Washington grapevine, followed by the press, spread the news that the Prime Minister was to appear on Capitol Hill tomorrow than each member of Congress began to discover all over again that he had more friends here than he had realized in quite a while. Trouble is, each member has been granted only one guest ticket, and in most cases that goes to the wife, or the wife's closest friend, or "Aunt Hallie" who's visiting here, or a powerful constituent whose support will be forever assured if the congressional member in question can get him in to "see Churchill."

It's all quite a problem; much more difficult than it sounds. I began feeling sorry for Senators and Representatives all over again yesterday afternoon when two of my own friends called to ask if there was "anything, simply anything" I could do to get them a ticket to the joint session tomorrow. Unfortunately, I couldn't. I'll be lucky to get there myself.

Dr. Escalante Is Honored At Luncheon

The new Ambassador of Costa Rica, Dr. Carlos Manuel Escalante, was the guest in whose honor Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union, entertained at luncheon yesterday.

Alfaro; the Assistant Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Dr. Joseph C. Rovensky, and the Secretary of the Embassy of Costa Rica, Dr. Alfredo Zuniga.

Also in attendance were the Chief of the Division of the American Republics, Philip W. Bonsal; the Assistant Director of the Pan American Union, Dr. Pedro de Alba; the Chief of the Division of International Communications, Thomas Burke; the President of George Washington University, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin; the Secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, George A. Finch; the Special Adviser to the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Dr. Enrique S. de Lozada; Harry W. A Few Strokes of the Pen And the Thing Is Done

ALL THAT RECENT COMMOTION whipped up by the motion picture exhibitors over the preponderance of "war pictures" among current releases seems to have been amenable to the simplest of solutions. It all comes back to the fact that the cinema in all its ramifications is the most flexible medium known to the amusement world.

CHARLES COBURN

Instead of being thrown into a panic by the complaints against the ceaseless waging of the war on the screen, the producers merely sat back in complacent contemplation of their backlog of some 185 feature pictures, reposing patiently on the shelves, and guessed all that needed to be done about it was juggle their release dates.

Since musical films seem to be the answer to the public's rebellion, as expressed through the exhibitors, it is interesting to note that there are 22 of this type of entertainment already in the cans waiting for the expressman to call and pick them up, six more in production and a comparable number of light comedies, without music, standing by to be let go.

Washington currently is getting a forestaste of the new scheme of staggered releases with "Hello, Frisco, Hello," costarring Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie, Lynn Bari and June Havoc, steaming along stupendously at the Palace, and "The More the Merrier" enjoying a similar popularity at the Earle, with Jean Arthur, Charles Coburn and Joel McCrea giving full value to one of the cleverest comedy scripts of the year.

That sort of thing can be kept up indefinitely by the Hollywood majors with no more serious dislocation of earlier plans than scribbling new dates on some pieces of paper. So why worry?

And speaking of "escapist" entertainment, there is still another brand that is neither musical nor lightly comic. It has not become a "trend" as yet, but easily could if a few of the other studios could dredge up a few more "animal stories" as engaging as the Twentieth Century-Fox item called "My Friend Flicka," previewed yesterday morning. This Technicolor picturization of the best-seller by Mary O'Hara—a story of boy-meets-horse—is a natural for everyone who ever loved a pet, equine or otherwise. It is given a splendid interpretation by Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster, Rita Johnson, James Bell, little Diana Hane and Flicka, herself, a four-legged actress that makes it doubly depressing that such a thing as horse meat ever was put on the market!

Mustn't Say the Naughty Word!

The simultaneous showing of "Gone With the Wind," at the Gayety, and "The More the Merrier," at the Earle, serves as a reminder that public sensibilities adjust themselves to the times. Remember what a furore was raised when it was insisted that Clark Gable, as Rhett Butler, in "GWTW," be permitted not to give a damn, at the end of the film? David O. Selznick had a pretty battle on his hands to keep that thoroughly logical observation in the script. Now in "The More the Merrier," Charles Coburn is damning the torpedoes and ordering full steam ahead to his heart's content. Columbia had an easier time of it, however, than Mr. Selznick. They simply contended that any modification of the lines would be in the nature of an insult to the ruggedness of Admiral Farragut—and got away with it on the single plea of historical accuracy. No one has fainted from the violence of Mr. Coburn's lusty "damns" to date, so far as I know.

Before anyone suggests to the talent scouts among his acquaintances—if any—that Susan Miller, stellar songstress with "The Merrymakers," at the National, is probably just the gal they have been looking for, he should be told how much too late he is. Miss Miller was the star of George Abbott's "Beat the Band," has appeared on the radio with such as Rudy Vallee, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy and Eddie Cantor, and in pictures has been seen in "Fifth Avenue Girl," with Ginger Rogers; "Time Out for Love," with Charles Boyer and Margaret Sullavan; with Abbott & Costello in "Keep 'em Flying," etc., etc., not forgetting "Never Give a Sucker a Break," with W. C. Fields. Quite a girl, by and large. Strictly by the way, you've never "Heard That Song Before" until you have heard Miss Miller sing it.

When Brig. Gen. Pat Hurley visited Stalin, he requested permission to inspect the front lines and asked for "some kind of papers as a pass." Stalin replied: "What do you mean by 'some kind of papers'?" Hurley then told him the story of General MacArthur coming upon a sleeping soldier, waking him and asking: "Who are you?" The soldier sheepishly answered: "I guess I'm some kind of a sentry." MacArthur told him: "And I'm some kind of a commanding officer, who's going to give you some kind of a court-martial" . . . Stalin laughed, signed Hurley's front-line pass, and said: "Here's some kind of paper, which will get you into some kind of front line, where you'll get some kind of salute."

The Fair-Haired Boy!

Hollywood, Calif., May 18.—Clarence Brown is the fair-haired boy since "The Human Comedy," and starts "White Cliffs of Dover" this week with Irene Dunne. He has an idea for a picture that to my mind would be sensational. Here it is: "Life of Jimmy Doolittle," ending the film with "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," to which the Government hasn't yet given the green light. Then, when the war's over, make a sequel of what Jimmy's done since Tokyo. Clarence and Jimmy are great pals. They talked about it when he passed through here months ago . . . Lillian Hellman, who arrived here last week, tells me she's made no deal with Joe Schenck. They met in Chicago, talked briefly about some stories. She has no idea what her next assignment will be. She's here to write an ending on "North Star." . . . Margaret Bourke-White hasn't sold her life story to Paramount as a starring vehicle for Loretta Young. The studio that's interested in buying it, and the one Margaret would like to sell it to, is Metro-Goldwyn. She's had several conferences with them.

Lady Comes Through

Long chat with Joan Harrison, our only woman producer, who took the story "Phantom Lady" to Universal before signing a contract with them. She tells me in "Phantom Lady" they'll need a screwy hat. Could I help her with that? Could I! She's had marvelous training with Alfred Hitchcock. "I'm a little spoiled, because every story I worked on with him was produced. When we parted a year ago I went to Paramount, and was half-finished with 'King Kong,' specially written for Charles Boyer, when he decided to become a producer." Nothing was done with the story—now it's old hat." She helped with "Attack by Night"—an action picture which Dorothy Arzner started with Merle Oberon. Dorothy doesn't know much about action stuff, admitted it, so somebody else redid the story. Merle was taken sick. Direction switched to Charles Vidor. "And," added Joan, "I've just this minute been able to get my name off the credit list." She's searching for a male writer to collaborate. Her ideas are so sane. She's got her head screwed on the right way, and I believe she'll open the door for many other women. Only male jealousy has kept the door closed all these years.

Little

"Ball of Fire," Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of a highly original screen play by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, which compiled a record run on the occasion of its first local release, is being revived this morning on the screen at the Little Theater, with Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck costarred.

Ordinarily that stellar combination might be relied upon to "put over" any run-of-the-mill comedy. But "Ball of Fire" is not a run-of-the-mill comedy, so, to give full value to the story of a group of aging professors embalmed with the dead languages, but brought to life by "Sugarpuss" O'Shea of the night clubs, an extraordinarily associate cast has been assembled.

Lending high point and rich substance to all the hilarity, romance and sentiment woven into the tale are such admirable mines as Oscar Homolka, soon to be seen as Ambassador Litvinoff in "Mission to Moscow;" Henry Travers, star of "The Moon Is Down;" Dana Andrews, Dan Duryea, S. Z. Sakall, the late Tully Marshall, Leonid Kinskey, Richard Haydn, in one of his drollest portrayals; Allen Jenkins, Aubrey Mather and even Gene Krupa and his orchestra.

One Summer's Romance

BY RITA HANSEN

CHAPTER XV

If Lisa hadn't loved Johnny, she would never have been able to make another entrance into the living room. She went back, believing that she hated him, but determined that he couldn't make her run away. Her hair was a curly, uncombed mass, her face was shiny and the housecoat was too big for her, dragging in the back because there were no slippers in the closet and she was in her stocking feet. But she went back.

Miles Wood was a stocky, frowning little man, with an abstracted kindness behind his growling speech. He stared at her and said, "Well, at least you look the part in that get-up." Nobody else said a word. They got to work and kept at it until they'd finished the play. Lisa was sure she'd be nervous, but when her first scene came in the first part of the second act, she found it was real to her, and there was an emotion in her that matched the girl in the play. She felt like Jenne, and she forgot that she was reading. When it was all over, she found that much of her tenseness was gone and she was feeling much better.

There was a long silence when they stopped readnig. Johnny sat twisting a script and staring at the floor, while Miles smoked a cigar and looked from one to the other. At last he said, "It reads all right. I think it could be done." And then he looked at Lisa. "You don't know a thnig about stage presence, but you've got something."

Johnny said, "I knew you'd like it, Miles. . . and isn't Lisa terrific? Don't you think she could come to do Jenne to perfection?"

Miles looked at her steadily. "Maybe, maybe not. We can try."

When everyone left, Johnny caught her up and whirled her around the room. "We're all set, my darling. If Miles does my play and you give a performance like tonight . . . nobody can stop us!"

"Oh, I'm glad, Johnny." She found she wasn't angry any more, only grateful that he had made her see how foolishly she was behaving. She tried to tell him this and he laughed and sat down on the couch with her in his lap like a child. "I guess I treated you pretty rough, but I am ready to knock your pretty little head off. Here I bring a girl all the way from New Hampshire because she's different from anyone I've ever seen. And suddenly she gets herself all fixed up so she looks exactly the same as every other blonde actress in New York. It was murder!"

She decided not to tell him it had been Julie's idea, for she was beginning to suspect Julie's motives. "I wanted to look so nice for the audition," she said wistfully. "I guess I'm just the milkmaid Cinderella type like the paper said."

"You're my type," he said, and suddenly he drew her head down against his shoulder. "Would I be acting like a wolf if I told you I have a most persistent and serious crush on you, my dear?"

Shee looked up at his quizzical, gentle face and in a wave of tenderness for him, put her arms around his neck. "I don't think so, Johnny, because I've been trying for so long not to tell you about my crush on you!"

"Doggone! he said wonderingly "I can't think of a thing to say. Look, tomorrow I'll write a tender and graceful love scene and we can rehearse it every night, but tonight all I want to is kiss you!"

"Well, why don't you?" she whispered, so he did, but, of course, the Filipino boy had to come in just then with some sandwiches.

And the next day their engagement was announced in a gossip column.

Contrary to Lisa's expectations, rehearsals were dull, nerve-wracking affairs, which left her mentally exhausted and impatient. Miles was difficult to work under, and sometimes he was impatient because there were so many things she didnt know. She worked hard, and gradually her new life lost its strangeness and the valley and her life there were only background to her thoughts.

Then surprisingly, she has a visitor from the valley. She walked into the foyer of her apartment house and there was Mark. It was good to see him again, and she said so, kissing him lightly on the cheek. She took him upstairs and made lemonade and asked him about everybody in Feather River and Willow Fork.

"You're looking very happy, Lisa," he said. "I read about your engagement. The Willow Fork News got it out of the New York paper. I hope it works out."

"Thank you, Mark," she said, a little huskily. She hadn't expected him to be so humble and understanding. "I . . . I'm sorry," she faltered, "that it didn't work out with us."

"That's nobody's fault, I guess," he said tolerantly. "Just one of those things. I still go and sit on our bench by the river some evenings. . . ."

Please, Mark."

"Are you coming back to Feather River? After you're married, I mean?"

She shook her head. "I don't know. Whatever Jimmy wants to do. We haven't gotten around to discussing plans yet. You see, we really aren't even engaged. Only Johnny's servant gave that story to the papers to make a little money. That's the way they do things here."

"It seems a shame to leave the house empty and closed up."

"Yes, I don't know just what to do with it. Somehow, it isn't so important. I don't suppose we ever will go back there to live."

"I was wondering . . ." He stopped then, twisting the empty glass in his hand. "You know I always liked your place. And now it would be a sort of remembrance of you."

First Lady Creates Stir At Dormitory

Women visitors are a dime a dozen at Arlington Farms, all-girl city of Government dormitories, but, even so, Mrs. Roosevelt created a stir yesterday when she toured Idaho Hall, first of six buildings being opened across the river.

She said dating booths in the lobby didn't look very comfortable or private, but liked most everything else, and 610 girls who hung out of doorways and over balustrades to watch her pass applauded her approval.

She said the map-decorated wastebaskets looked very "educational." She admired the light wall surfaces, some of which one girl privately confessed to have scrubbed down just that afternoon. Girls, girls, and more girls, proudly answered her questions about recreation, laundry and washrooms, and she viewed the kitchens and the store where everything from toothbrushes to pies is available. "Yes, ma'am," was password of the day, for most of the girls are Southern, not Idahoans.

The President of the United States was just another married man when Annnie May Ayers of Lexington, N. C., asked if Arlington Farms was patterend after "your husband's" school days dorm. Mrs. Roosevelt said the rooms were about the size of those at Groton, but that "my husband" thought partitions should be only half height to let more air through. "I told him," she said, "that would never do."

"Goodness," said Miss Ayers. Doris Funck, Roanoke, Va., and Ruth Zwissler, Chicago, girl war workers appointed to guide the First Lady. "We're glad you held out"

Mrs. Roosevelt also was interested to know that most residents made $1440 a year and preferred the cheaper double rooms at $16.50 to the $24.50 single rooms. "You can do a lot with $8," she was assured. Many of the girls have financial obligations back home, she was told.

She asked about bus transportation, too. "Quite good during day hours," the girls told her; "but try a graveyard or a swing shift," they added.

Finally she had tea with the girl's council of Idaho Hall and departed midst clicking of camera shutters by girls who call it home. Not even a policeman marred the scene.

Last night Mrs. Roosevelt officially opened Langston Hall, Oklahoma Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street Northeast, Negro Government girl housing development, similar to Arlington Farms.

Press Will Want To See His Bath, President Fears

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt, asked yesterday to comment on reports that restrictions imposed on reporters at the United Nations food conference amounted to restrictions on freedom of the press, said he had no reaction.

However, he said he had the reaction of a reputable and experienced newspaperman, not a member of the White House Correspondents' Association, who thought it would be nice to have a tier of 20 benches erected in the Cabinet room as the press could sit in on Cabinet sessions.

He said he went this individual one better with a suggestion for another tier in his office, where he sees sometimes a score of people a day.

"What's wrong with that?" a reporter interjected, while another inquired, "How soon can we expect it?"

Reporters next will be asking to come in and watch him take a bath, the President commented.

Color Massing Will Honor Dead D. C. Chaplain

The annual Massing of Colors Service of the Military Order of the World War will be dedicated to Chaplain Frank L. Miller who was killed in the recent plane crash in Iceland, and to all Americans who have given their lives in this war.

Jointly sponsored by the Military Order and the Washington Cathedral, the ceremony will be Sunday at 4 p. m. at the amphitheater of the cathedral. More than 200 military, veteran and patriotic organizations will participate in the parade.

Ralph A. Bard, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, will be the main speaker and will be introduced by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox. The United States Marine Band, under the direction of William F. Santleman, will give a 30-minute concert, preceding the services.

Transit Co. Job Hearing Is Postponed

The hearing scheduled for yesterday on charges of discrimination brought against the Capital Transit Co. was postponed until June 2 before the Committee on Fair Employment Practice.

The postponement was laid to the fact that while a chairman of the group has been named, the selection has not been made public.

It was understood that the Rev. Francis J. Haas, dean of social sciences at Catholic University, had been considered for the position. Th enew chairman will succeed Dr. Malcolm MacLean, who resigned in January.

Meanwhile the right of the President's Committee to hold the transit company hearing was challenged by Area WMC Director R. B. Deschner, but the matter of jurisdiction was not commented upon by national authorities.

Deschner had maintained that the committee was a "fact-finding" and recommending agency and that its functions already had been performed.

Deschner said that the matter should now be decided upon by the local WMC office.

Both the local area office of the WMC and the President's Committee are under the supervision of Chairman Paul McNutt of the WMC.

Victory Book Drive Succeeds in D. C., Mrs. Smith Says

The Victory Book Campaign, although regarded nationally as somewhat unsuccessful, has been progressing satisfactorily in Washington and will continue "as long as persons will donate books," Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, local chairman, announced yesterday.

Since January 5, when the campaign was begun, 51,980 books have been received here; about 46,000 have been distributed to various camps, and about 4000 have been found to be unsuitable, Mrs. Smith reported.

Mrs. Smith emphasized that the donated books, which are being received at the Southwest branch of the public library system, must be good in quality and condition. Many calls, she said, are sent in for dictionaries and, likewise, technical books published within the last three or four years.

Advertising Club Elects Krakow As President

Louis D. Krakow, advertising manager, District Grocery Stores, yesterday was reelected president of the Advertising Club of Washington at a meeting in the Capitol Park Hotel.

Newly elected were George B. Kennedy, first vice president, and Matt Mayer, second vice president. Secretary Charles J. Columbus and Treasurer Ernest S. Johnson were reelected. Courtland D. Ferguson and Carleton D. Smith were elected directors.

Introduced by Krakow, who presided over the meeting, Representative Rogers (Democrat) of California spoke about the impressions he has won in his young career on Capitol Hill, and stated the belief that "despite all the foolishness the onlooker may sometimes find among Congressmen and their debates," Congress on the whole is genuinely concerned with promoting the welfare of the people.

Citing as an example the recent voting on the extension of the reciprocal trade agreements, Representative Rogers said it gratified him greatly to have discovered that "there are no party lines on international issues in Congress."

Early Birds Observe 10th Anniversary

There was a jam session night before last in the Uline Arena and another one yesterday morning in the Willard Hotel.

The one at the Willard was formally entitled the tenth anniversary of the Early Birds Breakfast Club, but that was the only formal thing about it.

One man at the breakfast had a gun, and by firing it at frequent intervals he managed to keep some of the speakers and some of their auditors awake long enough for them to function in their respective capacities. At the Uline there were people who wished they had a gun, but they weren't the same people.

Grueling Experience

Attending both was a grueling experience, which this writer promises never to repeat.

Anyhow, this is supposed to be a story of the Early Birds breakfast—the charter members were there to prove it was the tenth anniversary—and they got up before breakfast to find a little humor in the midst of the serious business of living in a world at war.

All of the charter members present were supposed, according to the introductions, to explain how the club was founded, and why, but the how and why being pretty obvious, everybody just had a good time.

Hary P. Somerville said he founded the club as a commercial venture, and he could have been telling the truth.

Six Other Reasons

James E. Colliflower, Powell Browning, Charles P. Light, Leo C. May (the hardware man), Frank Romer and Dr. W. Marion Falls said they founded the club for six other reasons, and they could have been right.

J. Harry Cunningham, who was the first president, was unable to attend, but he wrote a somewhat lengthy letter giving his reasons for founding the club. He was probably right, too.

Anyway, it's gone on and on for 10 years, at 8 o'clock each Tuesday morning. Being a club, it has a president, John H. W. Roger, who presided, and a secretary, A. C. Mellichampe, who acted as secretary.

Of the two jam sessions, it was much the better.

BEAR THESE THREE IMPORTANT THINGS IN MIND WHEN YOU'RE BUYING LUGGAGE . . .

1. It Should Be Built To Take It! Look for rugged construction, topgrain leathers and sturdy fabrics . . . and you'll have luggage that will last for years. Our canvas cases are guaranteed water-repellent and bound with topgrain cowhide or rawhide. And the leather cases are built to take the hard knocks of traveling and come up smiling.

2. It Should Be Light in Weight! Now that "Redcaps" are as scarce as pearls in an oyster, you'll have to do your own carrying. And if you're going by plane, you must have luggage that's easy on the scales yet compact.

3. It Should Be Good-Looking! First impressions are the lasting ones. Your luggage is your silent, good-will ambassador . . . speaking volumes for your good taste. No matter what kind you have in mind, The Hecht Co. Modern Luggage Shop will, no doubt, have it. Solid color or striped canvas and gabardine weaves; both with topgrain leather bindings. Plastic-wood cases that are as handsome as they are serviceable. And genuine cowhide cases in redwood, British tan, Russet and Aniline-dyed colors. May we show them to you today?
